A. F. of L. Declares Italy "Outlaw Nation," Urges World to Refuse All Aid

Federation Convention Adopts Statement Saying Territory of Peaceful Nation Has Been Invaded for Purpose of Conquest.

ASK STRONGER STAND

Suggestions Made That the United States Should Adopt Stronger Policy to Bar Shipments.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 16 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor declared Italy an "outlaw nation" today and urged the countries of the world to deny her financial and commercial assistance in the Ethiopian conflict.

"The territory of a peaceful nation has been invaded," a statement adopted by the Federation convention said, "in order to carry out a policy of Fascist conquest.

"Our country was a leader in the movement which resulted in the Kellogg peace pact. The attack now being made on Ethiopia is in violation of the Kellogg pact."

The statement "emphatically approved" the neutrality policy of President Roosevelt and Congress and declared Italy "an outlaw nation, which all civilized countries should refuse to assist commercially, financially or in any other manner."

Suggestions from the floor that the United States should adopt a stronger policy to bar shipment of materials to Italy and that the Federation consider endorsement of the work of the committee for Ethiopian independence were rejected.

Open Conflict

The issue of craft against industrial union recognition reached open conflict today at the American Federation of Labor convention.

Three conflicting resolutions were before the delegates.

The resolutions committee, seeking a compromise of the controversy which has been in progress several years, has offered a motion to recognize both types of organization.

Industrial unionists, led by John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, sought adoption of a motion which would declare for industrial organization in the mass production industries "irrespective of craft or trade".

Advocates of the craft unions urged flat approval of their motion.

In effect, the covention must decide whether a worker who paints stripes on automobile bodies, for example, shall belong to a stripe painters' union or to a general union of automotive workers.

The craftsmen, led by John P. Frey, of the Metal Trades Department, claimed superior voting strength in the convention and were confident of victory. Some of their members have hinted they would leave the Federation if the industrialists triumphed.

Matthew Woll, resolutions committee chairman, proposed to open the debate during the afternoon. An effort was being made to reach the final vote during the evening.

Should the fight go on tomorrow, leaders were apprehensive the convention would have to continue next week.

A second controversial issue on which the committee's report impended was the proposed labor party.

Growing sentiment for a party backed by the Federation resulted in formation of a permanent organization headed by William F. Kelley of the United Textile Workers. Defeat of the proposal accompanied by a reaffirmance of the Federation's traditional policy of refraining from independent political action was expected.

Floyd Dell Busy.

Washington, Oct. 16 (AP).—In a cubicle right under the opera boxes and organ pipes of the old Washington Auditorium, Floyd Dell is writing an account of FERA's doings. The author of "Moon Calf," "Intellectual Vagabondage" and "Love in the Machine Age," is now on FERA's staff and is writing about the work done by persons drawing relief funds. He is an author amid plenty of "atmosphere." In front of his door is a huge stage filled with federal employes. Around him, over him, under him, are more workers. The overflowing New Deal has taken over the building and filled it with typewriters and filing cases.

To Buy Potato Surplus

Washington, Oct. 16 (AP).—The AAA is planning to buy surplus potatoes in an effort to raise prices 15 to 20 cents throughout the country. Five meetings of growers have been scheduled by farm administration officials at which details of the program will be discussed. Approximately $5,000,000 will be spent, it was estimated today, to buy about 12 per cent of the surplus crop and distribute it to the needy or possibly divert it to commercial channels.

Over Their Heads

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt says she has found a way to ignore the stares of crowds. "I have developed the self-protective habit of looking over people's heads," she told members of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.

City's Sound Financial Standing

Reading left to right—standing are William P. Capes, executive secretary of state Mayors' Conference; Albert H. Hall, Director of Research of Conference; Guy V. Haines, city clerk of Canandaigua; Hon. Thomas A. Wilson, former mayor of Binghamton; John B. Harris, mayor of Watertown; Walter B. Stone, former mayor of Syracuse. Sitting are Mayor Robert E. Patterson of Freeport; Mayor Charles Stanton of Rochester; Mayor Wendell E. Phillips of Port Jervis, Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman of Kingston; Fred B. Hollowell, secretary of Mayors' Conference, and Mayor LaGuardia of New York city.

Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman of this city was one of the mayors of the state who met with Mayor LaGuardia of New York city at his office in the city hall to discuss municipal problems. The meeting had been called to discuss the financial plight of 60 cities in the state of New York, of which number only 14 cities are in such financial condition that they can still borrow money by issuing bonds to carry on municipal government.

A report submitted at the meeting showed that in all 60 cities of the state that an average of 41 cents of each tax dollar collected is used to pay for "dead horses" or bonds previously issued and now maturing or to pay the interest that had accumulated on bonds already issued.

This left but 59 cents out of each dollar collected in taxes that could be used for municipal services, and that was the reason why many cities in the state have had to curtail municipal service during the past two years.

Mayor Heiselman brought out the fact at the meeting that in Kingston only 27 cents of each tax dollar is used for this debt service and that the remaining 73 cents is used to pay the municipal running expenses of the city.

That is the reason why in the past two years Kingston has been not only able to carry on municipal services but to expand that service.

At the close of the meeting the mayors present at the conference were entertained at dinner by Mayor LaGuardia in a room in the city hall directly under the mayor's office. This room was formerly used by former Mayor Jimmy Walker as a gymnasium.

Expects 1936 Gain.

Chicago, Oct. 16 (AP).—John W. Watzek, Jr., of Chicago, president of the national Lumber Manufacturers' Association, predicted today that residential construction expenditures would double in 1936. Members of the association's executive committee assembled today to plan even lower-cost housing. Two big objectives of the lumber industry, Watzek said, were production of a $1,000 prefabricated house of wood and greater use of lumber in building arches, supporting structures and radio towers. "Last year $200,000,000 was spent in residential construction," he said in an interview. "This year $400,000,000 was spent on residences and it will be at least double that next year."

8TH WARD REPUBLICANS WILL MEET TONIGHT

Improved Public Health

When Conrad J. Heiselman assumed office in January of 1934 it was necessary for Kingston physicians to send pathological specimens of their patients to Buffalo for laboratory examination as the city laboratory was not equipped for that purpose. This took two and sometimes three weeks before a reply would be received. In the meantime the patient might be suffering severely from his disease which could not be determined by examination here. As presiding officer of the Board of Health the mayor and the members of that board took up the question and gave it serious consideration.

As a result of the activities of the mayor today this vital work can be accomplished in 36 hours and in certain cases right at the operating table. This was accomplished by employing a competent pathologist, so that the Heiselman administration has made Kingston and the surrounding communities who avail themselves of the services of the pathologist more efficient in health work and the preservation of human life through the effective use of scientific advancement.

Dr. James S. Taylor, an accredited pathologist, was engaged by the Board of Health to take charge of this work, and his appointment met with the approval of the state health department which pays one half of the expense of microscopic and surgical diagnosis conducted at the city laboratory.

The employment of a qualified pathologist by the Board of Health met the unqualified approval of the physicians of the city.

The city laboratory since its inception has been located in the county building on John street, but Mayor Heiselman believed that a worthwhile project for work relief would be the erection of a modern building, centrally located near both hospitals. For that reason a project was submitted to the State TERA, which approved it, and the new city laboratory is now being erected on grounds adjoining the Kingston Hospital.

Republicans Control Massachusetts Today

Boston, Oct. 16 (AP).—Republicans celebrated today a hard fought bye-election victory which gave them a 21-19 control of the State Senate.

William H. McSweeney of Salem, defeated his Democratic opponent, John C. Birmingham, of Beverly, in the Second Essex Senatorial district by 4,844 votes. The unofficial tabulation gave McSweeney 15,682; Birmingham 10,838.

The election was held to fill the seat made vacant by the recent death of State Senator Albert Pierce, of Salem.

McSweeney captured the city of Salem, considered Democratic, by 1,200 votes. He took his opponent's home city of Beverly by 1,514 votes and carried Danvers and Marblehead by a comfortablee majority.

The State Senator-elect said he considered his election "not in the spirit of a tribute to me personally but rather a mandate from the people who have shown beyond any question of a doubt that they are through with the type of personal political government and the false economic government that they are receiving today from the Democratic administrations, state and national."

Hauptmann's Nerves Apparently Unshaken

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 16 (AP).—The footsteps of men marching past his cell to the electric chair is apparently gettling to be an old story to Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Hauptmann slept soundly last night as John Favorito, 25, walked through the little gray door to his death. Favorito was the fifth inmate to be executed since Hauptmann entered the state prison death house.

Hauptmann showed more interest in the other four. To each he vouchsafed a friendly handshape and the words:

"Pray to God."

Favorito was fully as impassive as Hauptmann. He did not even glance in the direction of the cell where Hauptmann slumbered. Prison officials said Hauptmann was aware that Favorito was the next to go but apparently allowed the fact to make no change in his plans for a nap.

Favorito was convicted of a hold-up slaying.

His passing leaves Hauptmann with but three companions in the death house. They are Charles Zeid, Philadelphia gangster, convicted of slaying a Camden detective; Edward McNamara, New York bank robber convicted of killing an associate, and Romaine Johnson, negro, convicted of killing a woman near Bridgeton.

Simkhovitch to Wed.

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 16 (AP).—Stephen Simkhovitch, 24-year-old playwright, who once wanted to be a "human icicle," and Dorothy May Cowan, 30, of Santa Barbara, are to be married soon. Notice of intention to wed has been filed by the couple. Several weeks ago Simkhovitch teamed up with Ralph Williard, Hollywood chemist, in an experiment to be froze stiff to demonstrate the latter's belief the process would not prove fatal, and would destroy certain germs. City and county officials teamed up to halt the proposed experiment.

Zenge's Mother Testifies How Son's Emotions Had Set-back on Last July 14

White-Haired Woman Bewildered By Events as She Takes The Stand in Chicago in Defense of Her Son.

SHOCK TOO GREAT

Mother Says She Felt Shock of Sweetheart's Marriage Was Too Much for the Boy.

Chicago, Oct. 16 (AP).—Mandeville W. Zenge's mother, Alice, defending him in the emasculation slaying of Dr. Walter John Bauer, testified today her son was hard hit emotionally when Bauer married Zenge's pretty sweetheart last July 14.

The white-haired mother seemed somewhat bewildered as she took the stand in Judge Cornelius J. Harrington's court, but kept her control until she stepped down.

Then she nearly collapsed in the corridor. The boy's father, J. Andrew Zenge, respected Canton, Mo., farmer, supported her until she revived.

Her testimony was part of Zenge's defense, offered through relatives and friends, that the girl's marriage to the doctor drove Zenge temporarily insane.

"Do you have an opinion, based on what you observed after July 14 (date of the marriage), as to the mental condition of your son?" asked Defense Attorney Joseph Green.

"I felt the shock had been too much for my boy," said Mrs. Zenge. Judge Harrington ordered the answer stricken.

"Do you believe he was sane or insane?" asked Green.

"I could not say," Mrs. Zenge replied.

Prosecutor Charles Dougherty, did not cross-examine.

Zenge, a 26 year old Canton, Mo., carpenter and farm youth was the victim of great "emotional shock," his attorneys contended.

First Class Workman

Irvin Bertram, of Wyaconda, Mo., who worked with Zenge just before the marriage and slaying, last July, told the jury in Judge Cornelius J. Harington's court that Zenge was a "first class workman and a hard working boy," until Louise Shaffer, who had been Zenge's sweetheart in high school, suddenly married Dr. Bauer.

Bauer, who taught chemistry in the Kirksville, Mo., College of Osteopathy and Surgery, left his bride after a three hour honeymoon to return to Ann Arbor, Mich., to attend summer school at the Uiversity of Michigan.

Found dying after a brutal operation he told of being kidnaped in Ann Arbor, brought to Chicago, and subjected to the attack on a south side Chicago lot.

Zenge's attorneys have admitted some of their own evidence may tend to show the 26 year old youth was "physically responsible" for the attack on Dr. Bauer. The doctor, teacher in a college at Kirksville, where he met Louise Shaffer, was kidnaped in Ann Arbor on July 30, brought to Chicago and emasculated by a crude operation performed on a south side lot.

The story told by Mrs. Zenge was of the same pattern as that of other members of the family. She said, a decided change came over her son after July 14, when he learned that the pretty Louise, night superintendent of nurses in a Kirksville hospital, had married Bauer that day.

"Did you notice any change in Mandeville after July 14?", she was asked.

"He ate little," the witness replied," he talked seldom and he told no one of his troubles. He would lay on the floor, thinking to himself."

Poletti Anti-Crime Head.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP).—Governor Herbert H. Lehman today named his counsel and chief adviser, Charles Poletti, as chairman of a committee of leading penologists and jurists to draft a program of anti-crime legislation for New York state. The governor named as members of the committee Chief Judge Frederick E. Crane of the Court of Appeals, Major John A. Warner, superintendent of state police, and 26 other jurists, enforcement officials and penologists. Mr. Lehman said his purpose in creating the committee was to "capitalize" on the work of the recent crime conference.

Held For Bigamy.

Hudson, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP).—Clarence L. Traver, 24, of Hudson, who was arrested at Poughkeepsie on a bigamy charge yesterday, waived examination and was held for the grand jury at his arraignment today. He is charged with having married Kathryn Clifford of Poughkeepsie while he was married to Dolores Stammel of Brooklyn. Bail was fixed at $1,000. The grand jury meets in November.

Support for Landon

Frank and Hagadorn Held for Robbery and Beating Aged Woman

State Troopers and Captain Richter of the Saugerties police on Tuesday afternoon solved the robbery and assault mystery which faced them as a result of the entrance to the Catherine Anderson place at Malden about midnight Sunday. The break in the case came after hours of investigation and examination of Fred Frank, alias Becker, of Malden, who was first suspected of being one of two men who gained entrance to the Anderson home by forcing a rear window. Frank had been seen about the place at approximately the hour when the 70-year-old lady was robbed and attacked. He was picked up and questioned Monday but denied any knowledge of the crime. However Tuesday morning he was brought to the court house and there again Captain Richter and Sergeant James Cunningham with Troopers Keefe, Reilly and Metzer questioned the young man as to where he had been. After a long examination he was finally accused of the crime after the Troopers found evidence of the crime upon his person. He then admitted he was one of the two and named as his companion Walter Hagadorn, also of Malden.

After the confession by Frank Captain Richter and Troopers Keefe and Metzer went to Malden and there picked up Hagadorn. He denied guilt at first but later admitted he had been involved in the act.

Two Men Arraigned

After statements had been taken the two men were arraigned before County Judge Frederick G. Traver, sitting as a committing magistrate. Fred Frank, 22, stated he lived at Malden and Walter Hagadorn, 21, stated he too was a resident of the same village where the victim lived. They were both charged with robbery, first degree, and waived examination and were held to await the action of the grand jury which is now in session. Judge Traver fixed bail at $5,000 each. The People were represented by District Attorney Cleon B. Murray and Roger H. Loughran also appeared.

According to the authorities the two may be charged with an additional crime after the aged woman is given a further examination.

Had Retired for Night

The 70 year old woman had retired for the night when someone broke into the place. She was able to tell that there were two men but in the darkness she was unable to see who her assailants were. Had it been light her failing eyesight would probably been unable to identify the men. After entering they went to her room and demanded money. She was attacked and beaten and a ring, a family keepsake, was removed from her finger. The value of the ring was slight and the lads admitted taking about $2.50 in money which they found in the house.

Frank stated to District Attorney Murray that he had none of the money and also said that he had been told by Hagadorn that no money was obtained but later he admitted that he believed Hagadorn had taken a small sum of money. Hagadorn was taken to Malden by Troopers later to recover the ring which had been hidden.

Credit is due Captain Richter and the Troopers for the manner in which the crime was solved as there were but slight clues to follow. The extreme age and physical condition of the victim made the case a difficult one. Photographs of the aged woman will be taken to show the manner in which she was beaten up during the robbery.

New York Registration.

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—Final registration figures showed today that 1,966,882 persons enrolled as voters in New York city, 423,556 more than in 1931, also an off-year. In each borough registration ran well ahead of 1921 figures, and in Queens ahead of 1924 registrations, when 42,174 enrolled against 272,907 this year. The city total was 10,478 below last year when there was a gubernatorial contest. In other boroughs enrollment lagged behind 1934 figures except in Brooklyn, where the totals were almost the same—762,424 this year, 702,724 last year. In no borough did this year's registration compare with that of presidential 1932, when 2,358,904 persons registered, or 1933, mayoral year, when 2,224,589 enrolled.

Mysterious Death

Los Angeles, Oct. 16 (AP).—The mysterious death of a high ranking Japanese on a special mission to the United States was under scrutiny today by the coroner's office. The dead man, Waichi Ota, 41, was found hanged with a silken cord in his cabin aboard the Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Taiyo Maru, shortly before the vessel sailed for San Francisco. Tomakazu Hori, Japanese consul in Los Angeles, disclosed he had been advised of the death. He said Ota was in the United States on "government business," but would give no details of his mission here.

Italian Planes Bomb Gerlogubi Today; Also Bomb and Destroy Radio Station at Mudleh.

Djibouti, French Somaliland, 5:50 p. m. Tuesday, Oct. 15—(Delayed in transmission) (AP)—Four thousand Ethiopian tribesmen, led by Colonel Siwiank, the Dutch veteran of the Boer war, have invaded Italian Somaliland and reported today an advance of 45 miles.

Colonel Siwiank reported he and his men went into the Italian colony at Dolo near the Kenya frontier and had captured the town of Lugh.

The Italians claimed to have captured Dolo 10 days ago.

A second and larger force of Ethiopians are crossing over the Italian Somaliland frontier midway between Teolo and the Webbe Shibeli river, occupying Oddur, about 65 miles south of the Ethiopian frontier.

Somali tribes were said to be joining the invaders in support of their old grievances against the Italians which have been intensified by the reports out of Ethiopia that non-combatants had suffered casualties through air bombing raids.

An even greater menace than these two strong raiding parties against the Italian troops under General Graziani in Italian Somaliland was an advance by Ras Desta's army of 100,000 men down the valley of the Webbe Shibeli toward the left flank of the Italian army.

Graziani thus far has made his main thrust along the British Somaliland frontier to his north but it has yielded him no additional ground.

Siwiank is well known in Italian Somaliland, for he owns a great estate there. He long has been established as an opponent of Italian rule.

Graziani's tanks are still holding the oases southwest of Bohotleh, but the Ethiopians claim that their infantry has retaken the wells at Udi, driving back the mechanized Italian front and disabling three tanks.

Italian airplanes bombed Gerlogubi again today, then dropped bombs on Gorsa and Handamara and destroyed the radio station at Mudleh.

Reports from Ethiopian sources claim that some of the air bombs dropped around Gerlogubi were charged with gas.

Eden Backs Sanctions

(Copyright, 1935, By Associated Press)

Geneva, Oct. 16—Anthony Eden of England backed energetically at a meeting of the economic sanctions committee of the League of Nations today a proposal that League states buy nothing from Italy, but no decision was taken by the committee.

Two "first aid" proposals for those states likely to suffer from repercussion of the economic sanctions were laid before the League sub-committee for mutual assistance.

Nicholas Titulescu, Rumanian foreign minister, expressed agreement that Eden's "buy nothing boycott" should be put into effect, but pointed out something concrete should be done to offset the trade losses to small states, which are likely to lose their Italian market if the plan goes through.

He suggested a "clearing house" arrangement by which the trade which Italy would lose through the operation of the "buy nothing plan" could be allocated among various League states according to the size of their losses.

Demitrioff Maximos of Greece also advocated Eden's plan, but he held that some form of financial "leveling out" of sacrifices should be adopted. He suggested a tax of 2 per cent on all imports of League states to create an equalization fund to be administered by a League agency for the benefit of the victims of the sanctions' repercussions.

Yugoslavia's delegate said his country stood to lose heavily through sanctions since 20 per cent of its exports normally go there.

The proposal, originally advanced by the British, for a boycott by League of Nations of purchases from Italy, was also supported warmly by the Netherlands and Belgium.

Rumania, Sweden, Russia and Turkey also favored it. Switzerland, however, advanced some questions.

The British minister for League affairs emerged from the session in high good humor yesterday and sources close to him said no real opposition had developed to this additional form of pressure against Italy.

OUR BEST DEFENSE

The neutrality law enacted by Congress a few weeks ago, made effective by presidential warning to American citizens and business interests, may be a more effective national defense than our army and navy. There is no more haughty talk of "freedom of the seas" and "the right to trade and travel where we please." Americans know now that it was mainly insistence on these theoretical rights that dragged us into the World War, bringing vast grief and a potential cost of at least 100 billions, without counting the Great Depression. No personal or commercial "right" is worth that price. The way to keep out of international fights, like the way to keep out of local and personal fights, is to remain neutral, mind your own business and avoid "blood profit."

"Acting under the authority vested in me," says the President's declaration, "I admonish all citizens to abstain from traveling on any vessel of the belligerents." Anyone who does so will do it "at his own risk." He further states explicitly that "any of our people who voluntarily engage in transactions of any character with either of the belligerents do so at their own risk." There will be no more financing of foreign wars. Enlistment of Americans in foreign armies is forbidden, entailing loss of citizenship. This is sound morals and good sense. It is also a good example to other nations. The best hope of ending war is to isolate it and starve it out. And any hardship imposed on innocent bystanders, through deprivation of their usual freedom and action and trade, should be amply repaid in the long run.

SHREWD TAX-COLLECTING

The state of Michigan recently spent $73,600 out of an authorized $75,000 on a concentrated advertising campaign to stimulate collection of delinquent taxes. Most of the money was paid for newspaper space, both daily and weekly. The ads proved a good investment, bringing in by September 1, the deadline, a total of ten million dollars. Of this amount, 75 per cent represented merely the first of 10 annual payments as provided under a special statute.

The deputy auditor-general reports that more persons called at the offices of the various county treasurers throughout the state and at the auditing department during August than during the preceding twelve months. There is a surprising enthusiasm everywhere for paying taxes, current and delinquent, when reasonable terms are offered to long-suffering property owners.

HOT DEMONSTRATIONS

It is strange how a small war in Africa can stir people up on the other side of the world. In Mexico City the other day a workman was shot by sympathizers with Ethiopia for expressing pro-Italian sentiments. And last Sunday Mexican Communists, in a public demonstration against "Italian aggression," ripped the swastika from the German consulate and dragged it through the streets—not because Germany had anything to do with the Ethiopian war, but because Germany, like Italy, was Fascist. There have been similar riots in London and other important cities.

It is a very good time for people in Mexico and everywhere else, while free to condemn wrong-doing in whatever quarter, to be calm about it in public. Cold condemnation is more effective than hot demonstrations, and safer.

BERLIN PACIFISM

One of the most pleasing echoes of President Roosevelt's speech at San Diego, pledging this country to be a good neighbor and remain at peace with all the world, comes from Chancellor Hitler's government organ in Berlin.

"In Germany," it says, "President Roosevelt's announcement of fundamental principles meets with understanding. For it agrees with the viewpoint which has been the cardinal principle of German policy." This is very reassuring, provided—First, that it really expresses Hitler's viewpoint. Second, that Hitler will continue in the same state of mind. Third, that he can control the military machine he has created.

BIBLE BOOM.

An American publishing house that prints playing cards and Bibles reports a change in the relative demand. In the first part of the depression there was less demand for Bibles and more for cards. Two years ago the tide turned. There is lessening demand now for cards and a growing demand for Bibles.

A moralist might read a lesson in this. "Righteousness profiteth a nation" says the Good Book. Scripture-reading is usually associated with righteousness, and in this case prosperity seems to have kept pace with the reading.

That Body of Yours

CAUSE OF ECZEMA

I write about eczema very often because it is the commonest skin disease known; it is estimated that more than half (55 per cent) of skin diseases are eczema.

Formerly all that was thought about was treatment—sulphur, mercury, zink or other ointment. Today eczema is investigated from various standpoints and treatment given according to what is considered the cause in any particular case.

It is now agreed that eczema is a part of a family combination of hay fever, asthma and eczema, and that just as there may be a tendency to tuberculosis, rheumatism, or cancer in certain families, so is there this tendency to eczema, hay fever and asthma.

However just what brings on the condition of eczema is often hard to find and so it has been well said that there is no one cause for eczema.

The main point already discovered is that in all patients afflicted with eczema there is a natural or family sensitiveness on the part of the skin, and to this is added the various substances or conditions which cause irritation.

Thus certain occupations cause eczema in some individuals with others working alongside them having no skin irritation whatever.

Similarly with foods; even beginning with tiny infants, the same foods will cause eczema in some and not in others.

And it is not always the same kinds of foods that cause the irritation for in some meat and eggs—proteins—cause the eczema, in others starch foods—bread and potatoes—and in others raw fruits.

The unfortunate part about food causing eczema is that some of our most nourishing foods, rich also in vitamins and minerals, are as likely to cause eczema in those sensitive to them as foods with poor fuel, mineral and vitamin value.

The point then is that there is a family sensitiveness of the skin to various foods and other substances and that the substances causing eczema in any particular case should be searched for, just as is the cause of any other ailment.

A few weeks ago readers of an important New York daily received a gruesome surprise. In an account of a serious automobile accident, the paper no longer confined itself to a bare and colorless statements of facts. Instead, it presented all the gruesome details, chronicling the mashed, oozing skulls, and compound bone fractures, the bleeding wounds of the victims. And it announced that it would continue this policy in the belief that it would help bring public realization of the horror of automobile accidents, and assist in creating real public cooperation in making our streets and highways safer.

HIGH COURAGE

by Jeanne Bowman.

SYNOPSIS: Anne Farnsworth has found the insolence of her relatives almost as hard to bear as the sudden and tragic death of her parents. Now Judge Kellogg, an old family friend, has told her that she is not the daughter of the Farnsworths but the daughter of an unknown mother — not even adopted. Unable to prove adoption, she will not inherit the large Farnsworth fortune. And Tom Farley, one of the relatives, plans further persecution.

Chapter 11

CAMPAIGN PLAN

FURTHER persecution? Anne stared at Ansel Kellogg in bewilderment. "But what else can he do?" she asked.

"He had planned to break all of this to you tomorrow at the reading of that part of the will ready to be made public. He had planned, I believe, to do it in so cruel a fashion you would try to retaliate.

"There is a provision, made by Luke, that should any person contest the will, that person will be cut off from any participation in the estate. You wouldn't know that. He would.

"And then there was the publicity he intended to have directed towards the clouding of your name, or lack of name.

"Aside from that, he intends to try to keep you from taking one article from your home. I can forestall him there. I want you to make a list of everything you own from fur coats to bath soap, all monies you have spent on the house, on anything or anyone other than yourself. Will you do that?"

"But there is so much, you know mother and Dad were both interested in my new home and were constantly buying things and storing them in the house because our new home wasn't ready for them. I know," she said, suddenly, "Yvonne, can list my clothing and personal things, and Harney say," she began with sudden illumination, "this is why Mrs. Farnsworth fired Mrs. Harney this morning."

She explained to the judge. "Of course," he agreed, "Charlotte and Tom would be working together. By getting Mrs. Harney out of the way, they could question your right to things and should she appear for you they could say she was doing it in retaliation for being discharged.

"Well, we'll fix that little game," he declared in triumph. "You have Mrs. Harney come to see me."

"She's down-stairs now."

"Send her up. Then you'd better go on home and have Yvonne pack your clothes, and in the meantime I'll try to figure out a place for you to stay.

"You won't have to appear at the reading of the will, tomorrow. I'll represent you, that will save you from some of their deviltry.

"Now, feeling all right? Think you'll be able to get home alone?"

Anne nodded.

"You've been a fine brave girl, Anne," Judge Kellogg told her in parting. "Luke would have been proud of you."

Anne carried this thought with her. To have Luke proud of her had always been her ambition. She cherished the thought no less now. She felt that he and Lucinda would have told her themselves had they not been sure their secret would never be revealed, and had they lived Tom Farley would have kept silent.

ANNE drove methodically. She stopped at the red lights, went into gear on the amber and released her clutch on the green, and all the time her mind tried to assimilate what she had learned in Judge Kellogg's office.

A traffic officer, seeing the sleek black car pass with a pretty girl at the wheel, talking aloud to herself, looked at a nearby clock. Too early in the morning for intoxicants; she must be angry. His wife talked to herself when she was in a temper; nevertheless he watched the car until it was out of sight.

"I am not the daughter of Luke and Lucinda. I am not adopted. Tom Farley wants me to challenge the will, but why need he? If I do not belong to these parents, I'm not kin, and therefore I won't receive a share. He wants to disgrace me publicly.

"Why? So I can't fight, I suppose." She turned into her own driveway, looked up at the big house which had been her home. Already it had taken on the look of another's. And then she saw Rob's car in the driveway.

Rob. He would take care of her. He would find her real parents, give her a name, and once she belonged to him, Tom Farley would be afraid to do anything. Tom was a little afraid of Rob, she'd always thought.

She parked her car, and rushed up the steps, and into the house. Rob was in the library. He arose from a seat near the fire and Anne sped to him, found herself engulfed in tweed clad arms. The blessed safety of them.

"Let's get out of here so we can talk," she said, and looked up at him as if wanting visible assurance of his presence.

"We'll go up to the house," he agreed, "this place has a thousand eyes and two thousand ears. Sharlee entertained me until she saw you coming. She thinks she's an animated mystery story. She kept saying, 'what a surprise you're in for.' Do you know what she means?"

"Yes," answered Anne, as Rob tucked her under a robe in his car. "I'll tell you when we reach . . . home."

"Fine." He started the car and as they drove along he talked of the canneries. "Tom Farley tried to get hold of me a couple of times. He was at Westport, but I didn't know that until I phoned the office from the house there. Wonder what he wanted? He said it was important. But then he thinks anything he does or says is important.

"Anne, I'll be mighty glad when I can run things my way. They're still raising cain down there about the fish-traps."

"Rob, you know what father said about that."

"I know. But Anne, you're going to trust my judgment, aren't you? Wouldn't you think me crazy if I tried to go into a motor race with a horse and buggy? Same idea, when you're in a competitive business you have to use modern methods. Well, here we are."

HE PARKED the car but made no move, and Anne, sitting beside him, looked down on the house, white against the fir trees. Lonely looking this day. A hammer was pounding somewhere inside, echoing dismally.

"Anne," Rob spoke cautiously, "wouldn't you feel more at home in the big house? You know we could sell this easily because it's a modest size and it won't be so easy to dispose of the other place. It's a bit old fashioned and all, and you'd like to keep the old servants with you, wouldn't you?"

He had thrown his arm about her, and Anne, weary and heartsick, was curled into the nest it made, trying to find the strength she would need to face this last trial.

"About the first thing I'd do," he went on, "is run that crowd out. They act like they own the place."

"They do," came in Anne's quiet voice.

"They what?"

"They own the place. Father, Luke Farnsworth left it to Uncle, to Lee and Mabel."

"Well, what do you know about that." Rob's voice was flat. He waited a moment, then, "perhaps it's just as well, I'd like to move down to Astoria for a while. Our house won't be dried out enough to live in for two or three months and that would give me time to straighten things out at the canneries.

"I like Lee, but he's lazy and things are slack as the deuce. I'm going to have to jump into the harness and work like the dickens if your interests are to be taken care of properly."

"Rob," Anne looked up at him, anxious to catch each shading of expression as he listened to what she had to say, "they are not my interests."

"What do you mean?"

"Luke left the canneries and the rest of his interests as an estate."

"Anne, what are you saying?" Rob had taken his arm from her shoulders and had turned to look at her in incredulous surprise.

"I am to receive only my usual allowance of one hundred dollars a month."

"There's something wrong, someplace, Anne. Your father told me soon after we were engaged that he wanted me to learn the business thoroughly because if anything ever happened to him, you would be left with the entire responsibility of the canneries.

"He said he'd already made out his will, leaving you the only heir."

"He changed the will," the girl interposed. "He changed it while you and I were waiting to see him, if you'll remember, that man who came out as we went in was an attorney."

Anne sustains, tomorrow, a still worse blow.

Digging The Bank

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

AT ONCE Willy Nilly began to dig a place for the money under the cellar of his house. He had a box in which to put the bag so it was as safe as could be, and he kept out a little for some things they needed right away.

He planned to go shopping within a few days.

All the Puddle Muddlers helped him dig until they were a muddy, dirty lot, but they enjoyed the work, and as they worked they talked over all that had happened.

"I'll certainly need to do a lot before I can attend to my ears," said Willy Nilly.

"The vegetables should be stored, apples should be gathered as we need many more than we have. I must repair the floor to my car. I must see about the headlights and before long my roof needs attention. Oh, there is a great deal to do, but it's fun to straighten up Puddle Muddle."

And they all agreed to that.

Now the money was safe and they all felt they should have some fun after their work, so all through the evening they played games.

At last it was time to stop playing and they put away the things they had taken over to the side-show, and wished each other pleasant dreams.

Mrs. Quacko went down to the pond, for bright and early she was going to get up and go down to call on Mrs. Quacker.

She'd certainly make that lady sit up and take duck notice. Mrs. Quacko went to sleep with a smile on the beak she put under her wing!

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—The administration, particularly those charged with responsibility for the nation's foreign policy, worried more than outsiders were aware when Senator Borah announced his intention of making a speech from his home in Boise on "America and the Present Crisis."

Their concern was occasioned by two facts:

First, the Idaho senator's announcement was made immediately after President Roosevelt had proclaimed his three-point program of action toward the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

And, second, no one yet has been able to foretell with any degree of success what Borah will say when he makes a speech.

Conceivably the "lone lion of Idaho" could have upset carefully-laid plans not yet given the opportunity for trial had he so chosen. His speech, coming within 48 hours after the President's proclamation, had what is known in newspaper parlance as "time value."

• • •

Interest Great

SOME observers noted that state department officials displayed more interest in Borah than they did in the vote of the League of Nations Council to apply sanctions to Italy, which was taken the same day.

Everyone from Secretary Hull down the line knew only too well the Idaho senator's staunch views on isolation. Each was aware, too, that if he chose to attack outright the neutrality machinery set up by the President there was imminent danger of the whole proposition being made a political issue at the very start.

Borah not only has been mentioned as a probable candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in '36, but he also is the ranking member of his party on the senate's foreign relations committee.

• • •

Purely Abstract

AS IT turned out, however, there was nothing in the speech to alarm the administration. He neither approved the President's three-point neutrality program nor did he condemn it. As a matter of fact, he didn't mention it specifically.

He tackled the whole problem in the abstract, demanding that this country pursue a policy of "honest neutrality."

If Secretary Hull or anyone else at the state department were to make a speech on the subject in the same abstract fashion as did Borah, he probably would use substantially the same language to express his position.

Perhaps Borah, who usually is pointedly specific in what he has to say, hasn't quite made up his mind yet on the President's neutrality program. Or it may be that he is willing to see it tried before he makes comment.

Whichever be true, this can be set down as a certainty: If he finds later the program runs counter to his convictions, he'll let it be known in no uncertain fashion.

Talks to parents

Music

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

If a child shows any signs of musical talent, his training should be begun early. Music, unlike most arts, is not a thing which can be put off. Too much depends on technique, and technique depends on pliant fingers and wrists. The best time to train these is when the child is still very young and elastic.

To start a child out on a musical career at fourteen or even at twelve is generally useless unless already he has had years of practice. He may learn to play acceptably and to get great pleasure out of his ability, but the chances are he will never be able to enter the ranks of professional musicians.

Many parents, unaware of this, start their children's musical training too late. For the average child this is quite all right, but not for the child who wishes to specialize in music. By the time he is four or five his first training should be begun, and under the best teachers.

If the child has real talent, and more still, if he has genius, he will be able to profit by these early lessons, if not, nothing has been lost. The dancer, the acrobat, all athletes start early. Most musical instruments demand the same flexibility of muscle, the same perfect control, the same stamina as required for the dancer, acrobat or athlete.

Music is an exacting mistress. The child who goes into it as his life's work, can do little else. He cannot divide his time between college and music, or both will suffer and his health with them. He cannot play baseball or any games which risk the safety and agility of his hands and fingers.

It is wise to think long and seriously and to be sure that the talent is worth the sacrifice, before encouraging the child to choose music for his career.

The World of STAMPS

By QUINTON JAMES

One hobby to another—philately to collection of Persian art—is the pleasing gesture of the latest Russian issue. It commemorates the third international congress of Iranian or Persian art and archeology at Leningrad.

Of the large label size, the stamps are surprisingly distinctive. A single design is used for the four values, and it consists of a reproduction of a hunting plate of the type presented to the Persian ruler in the fifth or sixth century. The particular plate reproduced shows the shah mounted on a horse as he turns in the saddle to speed an arrow into a charging lion.

At the two lower corners are horned winged horses copied from Persian pottery that dates back to 300 B. C.

A recapitulation of the set shows these denominations and colors: Five-kopeck, orange; 10-k, green; 15-k, purple; 35-k, dark brown. The stamps are bi-lingual, the postage notation at the top being in Russian, while the inscription at the bottom designating the purpose of the issue appears in French.

Boulder Dam Comment

Collector comment of the more or less critical nature, almost in connection with most of the recent new U. S. Commemoratives, apparently is coming back to a certain extent now that the Boulder Dam 3 cent has gone into general use.

The philatelist, after inspecting the stamp, has expressed the belief that the design used of the full view of the dam and its bordering mountains does not offer sufficient contrast to provide a pleasing overall result.

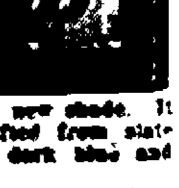
Another comment has centered around the lack of ease in determining the top of the stamp from the bottom.

The stamps are printed by the flat plate process and every stamp on the sheets of 50 is perforated, eliminating "straight edges." The perforation is 11 all around, and many shades of the purple ink have been noted. Plate numbers run from 21,455 to 21,466, inclusive, a total of 12.

While the first print order was for 50,000,000, the demand has been so great that an additional 25,000,000 has been requested.

Postage Dues

While there hasn't been a basic change in the design of the postage due stamps of the Union of South Africa, a self-governing dominion of the British Empire, since that adopted in 1927, there was a complete color change in the set of five values in 1932 to 1934. Today another denomination comes out in a new shade. It is the 2-penny, shifted from slate blue and black to dark blue and black.



As a matter of fact, although there was a change in the inscription of the dues in 1927-28, the design in use today is generally identical to the first to appear in 1915. The 1927-28 change came about with adoption of "South Africa" instead of "Union of South Africa."

Unlike the regular postage issues, which are printed separately in two languages, one set in English and one in Afrikaans, the postage dues are bi-lingual with the two languages placed on the single stamp.

HAVE YOU A FORD?

It's a great automobile, without a doubt. Plenty of "looks". And plenty of power in that smooth-running engine. To get the best anti-freeze and corrosion protection for that engine this winter use Eveready Prestone.

Eveready Prestone is an anti-freeze of the type recommended in the Ford V-8 instruction book. It contains effective inhibitors to control rust and corrosion. It will not evaporate or boil off. It has no odor. It contains neither glycerine nor alcohol.

This year, thanks to biggest sales in history, Eveready Prestone is only $2.70 a gallon. Your dealer has a chart showing exact cost of protecting any car, in any temperature down to 62° below zero. Put in Eveready Prestone now and be free from freeze-up worry the entire winter. According to the 20 year average, freezing weather is due in Kingston about Oct. 20th.

Plantings of perennials need revision every four or five years. For iris, phlox, and peonies, the clumps should be dug and the soil shaken from the roots. Each new division should have at least two healthy eyes and a section of the healthy root tissue. Phlox and iris grow rapidly and soon exhaust the soil of fertility. 6 Navy Fliers Claim Seaplane Hop Record

Alameda, Calif., Oct. 16 (AP)—A world distance record for seaplanes was claimed today by six navy fliers after a 3,387-mile non-stop flight from Panama in a newly designed ship.

The twin-motored craft, commanded by Lt. Comdr. Knefler McGinnis, glided to a landing here at 2.21.15 p. m. yesterday (5:21:15 p m., eastern standard time), 34 hours and 51 minutes from Panama.

Commander McGinnis, who led a navy squadron 2,399 miles from San Francisco Bay to Hawaii in 1934, said he believed the flight from Panama would better the seaplane distance record held by Mario Spoffani, Italian flier.

Spoffani's mark is 3,063 miles, made in a flight last July from Malfalcone, Italy, to Bervera, British Somaliland.

McGinnis explained the purpose of his flight was "to establish a new long distance record for seaplanes, which I think we have done, and to base the ship at San Diego."

"We came through all kinds of flying weather and the plane performed perfectly," McGinnis said.

Officials said the navy was purchasing 60 planes similar to this new one which is designated as XP3Y-1. Its crew, besides McGinnis, comprises Lieut. J. K. Aberill, second in command; Thomas P. Wilkinson, navy pilot; Charles S. Bolka, chief machinist; A. E. J. Dionne and E. V. Sizer, radiomen.

In the early days of searching for a device that would permit telephoning over greater distances, the Bell Telephone Laboratories developed the "loading coil." This one improvement immediately gave transmission engineers two alternatives: Either to use finer wires for the same distance or to go greater distances with wires of a given size.

The resulting use of finer wires brought about reductions in capital investments that offset the whole cost of research and development for the 50 years and more of the Bell System's existence.

Interest at 6% on this amount pays the present annual cost of research—an activity which is fundamental to continued improvement and economy in telephone service. New York Telephone Company.

ROLLS ROYCE SEDAN BURNS NEAR WEST PARK BRIDGE

Deputy Sheriff Sam Fluckiger of Saugerties, returning home from a trip to Newburgh Tuesday evening, stopped near the West Park bridge on 9-W to direct traffic, there being congestion when a Rolls Royce sedan suddenly burst into flames as it was being driven along the highway. The car bore a New York 5-F license. The driver, according to Deputy Fluckiger, escaped uninjured from the burning car.

HERD OF THE LATE MATTHEW DEWITT TO BE DISPERSED

Mrs. Cornelia M. DeWitt, executrix, is announcing a dispersal sale of the fine herd of cattle of the late Matthew T. E. DeWitt, along with extensive equipment of farm machinery, horses, hay, grain and household furniture, including antique articles. Mr. DeWitt's herd included 24 registered Holsteins, raised by him and the sale scheduled for the end of the month, will probably attract cattle buyers from a distance.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS and SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—School days are here again for the youngsters of Hollywood too.

In the movie studios the "Three R's" or their ultra-modern educational equivalent, hold sway as rigidly as in any school room.

But there is a difference in the movies' educational standards today. In every major studio, where representatives of the state department of education have strict control of child welfare matters, this rule is paramount:

"The child comes first!"

Teachers Have Authority

Eleven years ago, when attractive Miss Rachel Smith became the first resident teacher to be appointed to a studio (Paramount) conditions were different. There were rules regarding film work by minors, but these were not too rigidly enforced. A child could work no more than eight hours a day, no later than 10 p. m., but if a big scene came in conflict with the rule, the studio people amiably permitted themselves to look the other way.

Now, according to Miss Smith, who has been instrumental in securing many improvements in child working conditions, the studio heads realize that what is best for the child is best for pictures. And they give her—and her counterparts in other studios — almost dictatorial powers where child actors are concerned.

Laws Explicit

By state law every child working in pictures must devote three hours of his time to education, one hour to recreation, and the maximum working day is eight hours. This maximum is scaled down, according to age, to a "working day" of 20 minutes, actually before the camera no more than 30 seconds at a time, for infants under six months.

Not only the youngsters like David Holt, Virginia Weidler, Shirley Temple and Jane Withers are subject to the educational requirements, but "children" like Ida Lupino and Ann Shirley who are legally minors must attend their respective studios' "little red schoolhouses."

In the schoolroom, if nowhere else, the adulation that child stars receive is conspicuously absent. They are treated with sympathetic understanding, according to Miss Smith, but the same is accorded to all the children.

PORT EWEN

Port Ewen, Oct. 16.—Sadie Gundry, state councilor of the Sons and Daughters of Liberty of the state of New York, with her staff of officers will pay an official visit to Esopus Council 42, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, this evening at their council rooms in Pythian Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Boese and Captain William Atkins and wife were recent callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Atkins of Broadway.

The Methodist Episcopal Church choir will rehearse at 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening instead of on Saturday.

Miss Helen Atkins spent the week-end with her grandmother, Mrs. William Schoonmaker, of Kingston.

ULSTER CO. REPRESENTED AT COBLESKILL SCHOOL

Three students from Ulster county have registered for work at the Cobleskill School of Agriculture and Home Economics. They are Oakley Maynard of Port Ewen, Vincent Platania of Highland and Frances Bloomer of Marlborough.

Among six registering from Orange county is Mary R. Deyo of Wallkill. In all 24 counties of the state are represented and there are also students from four other states. One student in Home Economics, Elfrida Heintz, comes from the Republic of Esthonia.

PREVIEWED

Today

Broadway: "Broadway Melody of 1936." The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios turn musical again, seemingly for the express purpose of putting across a young lady by the name of Eleanor Powell, who proves to be about the closest thing to Fred Astaire in this or any other vicinity. In a story of the show business and the "Big White Way," Miss Powell scampers through her dances in an astounding and satisfactory manner, to the lilting tunes of several excellent songs, manufactured by two of Hollywood's best jazz composers. The whole thing is done on a grand scale for nothing has been spared in a financial or directorial way to make this talkie fairly shout with big movie names and expensive settings. Along with Miss Powell, we find such gracious performers as June Knight, Una Merkel and the Albertina Rausch Ballet, which incidently contributes one of the most beautiful chorus numbers ever witnessed on any screen. Jack Benny of radio fame, Buddy and Vilma Ebsen of the stage, the petit songster, Frances Langford, Robert Taylor, Nick Long, Jr., Sid Silvers and Harry Stockwell are among the featured players in a cast numbering hundreds. You will like the comedy dancing of the Ebsen duo, and the work of Jack Benny is excellent. A don't miss musical extravaganza.

Orpheum: "It Happened in New York" and "Behind Green Lights." The first offering of this double feature bill stars Lyle Talbot as a taxi driver who is in love with Heather Angle. Hugh O'Connel supplies the comedy while Gertrude Michael helps with the love interest. "Behind Green Lights" stars Judith Allen, wife of the Irish heavyweight, Jack Doyle. On Wednesday night Billy Joy Jackson will entertain as master of ceremonies at the weekly amateur show.

Kingston: "Dressed to Thrill" and "Public Menace." The opening number at the Kingston isn't new as far as plot structure is concerned, for it tells of a little French girl who is loved and forgotten by a wealthy young man, yet she finds him once more when she becomes the toast of Paris. Tutta Rolf is lovely and charming, in this, her first American film, and Clive Brook is as effective as always. "Public Menace" is the second full length feature with Joan Arthur going melodramatic in a big way. The show is filled with thrills, romance and noise.

Tomorrow

Broadway: Same.
Orpheum: Same.
Kingston: "Smilin' Through" and "Super Speed." The screen's most beautifully done tear jerker comes back to the Kingston screen in the first picture on the double feature bill, a story so charming and simple in its telling that the tragedy of a broken love is forgotten in the quality of the acting, for Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard and Frederic March all contribute as fine performances as anything ever given to the screen. Although this romantic tragedy has been done on the screen many times before, it will never lose its appeal or its popularity. "Super Speed" is the second full length attractions, a racing, roaring melodrama that features Norman Foster along with a capable cast of lesser performers.

This Toque and Muff Purse Are Quickly Made

PATTERN 5458

The toque is again in high favor with Dame Fashion. She well knows how easy it is to wear. And this one in crochet meets with her loud approval for all her forecasts point to crochet as an outstanding note for Fall and Winter. The toque is so simple to make and has, as chief decoration, a cable effect that is very lovely. The muff-purse—and how we all love that—repeats the design of the toque. Its shirred ruffle and fullness give it a feminine note that will add much to your appearance.

In pattern 5458 you will find complete instructions for making the set shown; an illustration of it and of the stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to the Kingston Daily Freeman Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th street, New York, N. Y.

The annual turkey supper and fair of the Reformed Church of the Comforter will occur Wednesday afternoon and evening, October 23. This will be given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society and they extend a very cordial invitation to the general public for their patronage. The following will be the menu: Turkey and dressing, mashed potatoes and gravy, buttered onions, cabbage salad, cranberry sauce, celery, wheat and rye bread with butter, pumpkin pie and coffee.

O. E. S. Card Party

Kingston Chapter, No. 155, O. E. S. will hold a card party Tuesday evening, October 29, in the Odd Fellows Hall, corner of Broadway and Brewster street. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Chicken Supper

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Hurley Reformed Church will hold a chicken supper in the basement of the church on Wednesday, October 23.

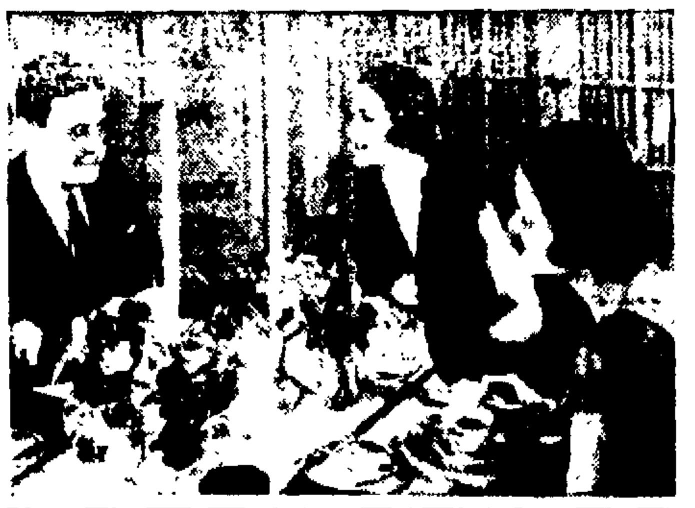
Wall paper can be purchased to look like wood paneling and may be used to form a dado around the entire room. Woodwork may be repainted to fit in with the general decorative trend.

DRESSY FROCK FROM SIMPLE PATTERN

Simple, yet dressy—and oh, so wearable! Here's proof again, that Marian Martin knows how to design for you just the kind of easy-to-make frocks your Fall wardrobe needs! See how gracefully the shirring (very 1935!) follows the rounded outline of the collar . . . how alluringly the sleeve fulls out above the slim wrist . . . how richly the gold filagree buttons set off that simple blouse panel. To cap the climax, you'll easily find just the soft silk in glorious colorings that this frock requires. Say a purple corded silk crepe, as shown. Or any of the new novelty silks or sheer crepes that are supple enough to shir well. Pattern comes in sizes 12 to 20 and 30 to 40.

To get Pattern 9602, send 15c to the Kingston Daily Freeman Pattern Department, 232 West 18th street, New York city.

MODERN METHODS OF TABLE SETTING SIMPLIFY MAIDLESS ENTERTAINING



CHARMING. INFORMAL SUPPER TABLE

Do you enjoy entertaining—but get a trifle flustered when it comes to setting the table? Then just remember that the correct way is usually the easiest way.

See how simply the table is set for the Sunday evening supper we've illustrated. The hostess has used a linen runner and doily set appropriate for this informal meal. For decoration she has flowers in small, inexpensive glass bowls.

The puzzle of table setting will be solved forever if you'll remember that silver is placed in order of its use, starting at the outside; forks at the left; knives at the right.

Setting Informal Table

Our diagrams show an easy and correct way of setting a table for Sunday night supper served without a maid. The first course being bouillon, there's a service plate and the bouillon cup on its own small plate, at each plate. On the left are forks for the main and dessert courses. On the right, teaspoon for bouillon, meat knife and dessert-spoon. The water glass is at top of knife; napkin to left of forks.

It's smart nowadays to use a dessertspoon and fork for the dessert course. Both are needed for pie or other desserts served on a plate. Only the spoon is necessary for dessert served in a sherbet glass, or similarly shaped dish. Placing the dessert-spoon and fork on the table at beginning of the meal is correct and sensible if you've no maid and aren't using finger bowls. If you prefer, they may be placed on the table in alternative position indicated by spoon and fork in dotted lines.

In our center diagram—of main course—a heated dinner plate takes the place of the service plate. Coffee is to be served in the living-room, and third diagram shows arrangement of coffee service and cups on a tray.

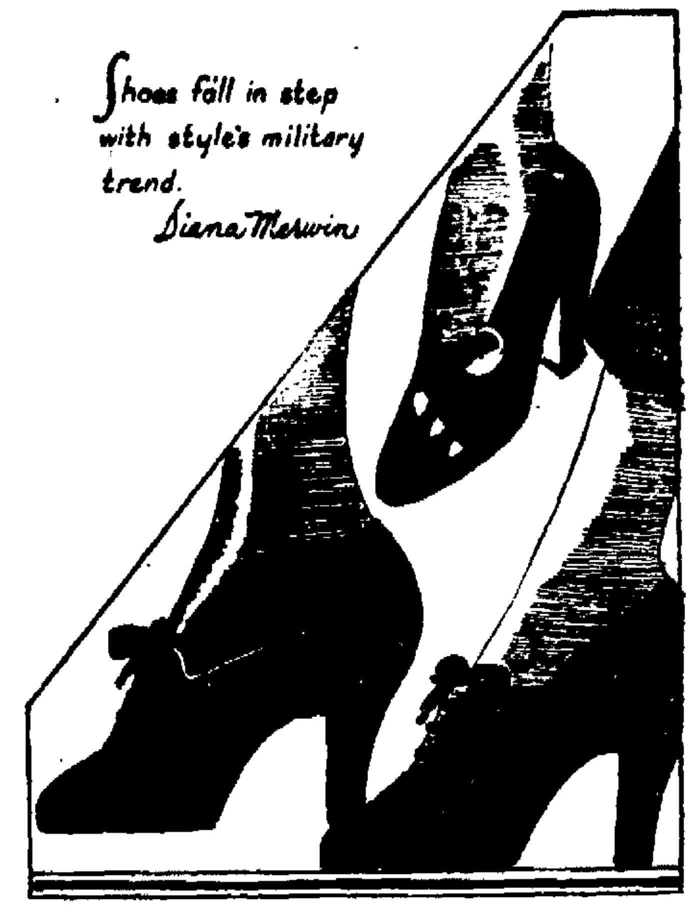
MODES OF THE MOMENT



Shoes fall in step with style's military trend.
Diana Merwin

The shoe mart is so full of a number of things this season that one hardly dares to start listing all of the individual styles being shown for winter wear.

The military trend of fashion has invaded shoe designing rooms too, with the result that there are many smartly militant models in both street and afternoon types. High cut oxfords are seen with braid trims, collar effects, piping and gold or silver touches on dark leathers. There are narrow, squared toes, round toes that noticeably shorten the foot, moderately high heels, upstanding tongue treatments, bow trimmings, metal buckles, perforations, cutouts, brightly colored leather stripping and stitching.

In the sketch above at left, the military mode is exemplified by an oxford of brown kid with its high cut simulated collar and trim rows of beige piping.

At the center is shown the new monk shoe, a flattering high cut model in dark kid with bright green stitching and a smart gold buckle. Ingenious cut-outs produce the gracefully draped theme, so important to latest garment styles.

At right, another oxford of Araby green leather has matching lizard trim and displays the rounded toe styling which cleverly shortens the appearance of the foot.

Africa War Guns Shatter Prophecies For 'Peace Era' Made Following Armistice

By The Associated Press

The roar of guns is heard among the Ethiopian outposts.

Shells fall from the sky, raining death and destruction.

It is 17 years after the Armistice of the "war to end wars."

On that memorable day, November 11, 1918, a surge of joy swept over the civilized world.

New hope for the future rang out from centers of government everywhere and was reiterated from the mouths of statesmen.

President Wilson appeared in person to deliver his armistice message to congress:

"Armed imperialism such as the men conceived who were but yesterday the masters of Germany is at an end, its illicit ambitions engulfed in black disaster. Who will now seek to revive it?"

"Dawn of a New Era"

The casualty lists of the American expeditionary forces were still appearing in American newspapers when leaders in all walks of life and prominent statesmen of the world took up the cry.

Senator Harding of Ohio saw "the dawn of a new era in the world."

Senator Swanson of Virginia said: "From now on . . . autocracy and military despotism will cease. . ."

Senator Key Pittman, Nev.: "From that (Peace) conference will come the establishment of the principles that he (Wilson) has advocated and which will mean an enduring peace. . ."

Senator France, Maryland: "We have forsaken forever the flesh-pots of narrow sectionalism, of selfish, rampant, and corrosive individualism, of national materialism. . ."

"Victory For Liberty"

Representative Harrison, Miss.: "It (the Armistice) is a second Declaration of Independence for the world, a Magna Charta for oppressed peoples in every clime."

Lloyd George, wartime Premier of Britain: "It is the most wonderful victory for liberty in the history of the world."

King George of England addressed President Wilson and the American people: ". . . this greatest of democracy's achievements I thank you and the people of the United States for the high and noble part which you have played in this glorious chapter of history and freedom."

Allied Generalissimo Marshal Foch (getting America's D.S.M. from Pershing.): "We have gained the greatest battle in history and saved the most sacred cause—the liberty of the world."

"Old Europe Is Dead"

Wilson's Thanksgiving Day Proclamation. "God has in his good pleasure given us peace. It has not come as a mere cessation of arms, a relief from the strain and tragedy of war. It has come as a great triumph of right. Complete victory has brought us, not peace alone, but the confident promise of a new day as well, in which justice shall replace force and jealous intrigue among the nations."

General Jan Christian Smuts, African soldier-statesman: "Old Europe is dead and a new world is slowly emerging."

Guns roar along the outposts of Ethiopia. Bombs rain from the sky, bringing death and destruction.

Seventeen years ago, the armistice of the war to end wars was signed and a rejoicing world hailed it with new hopes for the future.

G. O. P. and Democrats Head for Final Stretch

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP)—Democratic and Republican leaders slipped their campaign machinery into high gear today for a dash to the finish line in the race for control of the New York state Assembly.

The voters of the state pick the winner on November 5, and leaders of both parties freely admit their decisions will have a far-reaching effect on both the state and national political picture.

Governor Herbert H. Lehman, who has repeatedly said continued Democratic control of the Assembly is necessary in order to complete the program of social and progressive legislation inaugurated by the 1935 legislature, assumed personal charge of his party's campaign.

He called party leaders and upstate assembly candidates to a luncheon meeting today to discuss behind closed doors the Democratic strategy in the final drive. Included in luncheon guests were Senate leader John J. Dunnigan and Assembly Speaker Irwin Steingut who has been carrying the Democratic torch in upstate New York.

At Buffalo yesterday Steingut accused the Republican high command of limiting its campaign efforts to criticism of the last legislature and asked which of the many bills sponsored by the Democrats "they intend to repeal."

Republican leaders, who have sought to make the election a test of the New Deal in President Roosevelt's home state, planned to increase their attacks on the state and national administration in their "stretch drive." They have been campaigning on state and national issues in the face of the Democratic contention the fight should be waged on state issues alone.

Melvin C. Eaton, Republican state chairman who has acted as the spearhead of the G. O. P. drive, attacked the national potato control law in a speech last night at Poughkeepsie before the Dutchess county women's Republican Club.

He termed it an "asinine bit of legislation" and roundly criticized President Roosevelt for "ignoring" the law's enforcement "after ramming the bill down the throats of Congress."

Another Republican leader, Senate Minority Leader George R. Fearon, assailed both the national and state administrations in a radio address last night.

He called for election of "a Republican Assembly which will at least act as an effective brake on the destructive legislation of the Democrats" and accused the state and national administrations of "hamstringing American industry" with high taxes and restrictive legislation.

Distribute Booklets On Insurance Law

Industrial Commissioner Elmer F Andrews announced today that the public employment offices in this state henceforth will serve as distribution centers in their communities of the newly published booklet dealing with the text and analysis of the New York State Unemployment Insurance Law.

Prompted by demand throughout the state for information concerning the state's unemployment insurance law, Commissioner Andrews chose the offices of the New York State Employment Service and the National Reemployment Service, because their close contact with public, employer and employe interests assured a speedy distribution of the booklet.

In Ulster county, Joseph B Carey, manager of the office at Kingston, will take charge of distributing the booklet on the unemployment insurance law to employer, employe, professional and civic groups.

Designed to give a clear understanding of the provisions of the New York State Unemployment Insurance Law, the booklet devotes 15 of its pages to analyzing and interpreting the points most important to employers, employes and the public. The rest of the publication is devoted to the text of the law It also defines clearly the functions of the division of unemployment insurance which was created within the Department of Labor to administer the law.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up" Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

REMODELING AND NEW CONSTRUCTION

Housing Hints

Tips on How and What to Improve

House Plants

In caring for house plants disturb the roots as little as possible. In transplanting, thoroughly wet the earth and carefully lower the root covered by a ball of earth into the new pot. Place all transplanted plants in the shade for a few days, then gradually bring them to full light.

Fall Check-Up

We live at home more hours during winter months than in any other season. We overlook the fact that comfort can come only in a well-maintained home, and we do not consider making repairs during the winter. This condition is purely the result of habit. There are many things which can be done to our houses to make them more livable and many which are badly needed to prevent the rapid deterioration which occurs when repairs are not promptly made. Be sure to check up your house during the fall to prepare it for winter.

Draft Regulation

With the usual equipment, a chimney draft will not be steady and uniform. An irregular draft will make the fire unsteady and cause waste of heat and fuel.

Automatic chimney draft regulators are now available. This consists of an opening in the smoke pipe between the check damps and the chimney, normally closed tightly. The door is pivoted, and when a puff of wind at the chimney top increases the draft the door of the regulator will be pulled open and enough air will enter from the cellar to overcome the effect, with no change in the strength of the draft through the fire.

Lightning

In determining what procedure to follow in providing lightning protection for specific cases it is necessary to consider a number of factors. Take into consideration the frequency and severity of thunder-storms, the value and nature of the building and its contents, and local conditions.

In addition, the home owner should determine the relation of the cost of lightning protection to insurance premiums and the personal hazards and indirect losses which may result.

Wide Porches

A wide covered porch cuts out a great portion of the light which would, if the porch were removed, be available for the room which has windows opening onto it.

Before winter comes, and the living or dining room opening onto the porch becomes dark and gloomy, remove the old porch. An attractive open terrace, protected by a green hedge, will be far more pleasant. During the summer an awning may be used for protection from the sun.

Federal Housing Administration insures modernization credit loans for work of this kind.

Entry Coat Closet

During the winter considerable space is needed for hanging heavy coats, and for galoshes, umbrellas, etc. An adequate closet built into the entry will be found very useful.

A shelf of hats and a waterproof floor for rubbers should be provided. A container for umbrellas may be built in.

It is a good idea to use a waterproof paint on the walls.

Restoring Old Houses

In many parts of the country, there are fine old houses in need of repair and restoration.

Instead of tearing out the whole stair railing which is broken in places, repair it so that the house will retain its original decorative features.

Paneled doors, fireplaces, cupboards, and many of the interesting features in historic houses should be carefully restored.

It is wise to call in an architect. He will be careful to keep the spirit of the early work and will make all necessary new additions harmonize with this.

NEW LIGHTWEIGHT COPPER SHEETING

The individual who wishes to use copper for porch and other roofs and has hesitated in doing so because of the cost will be interested in learning that the industry has developed a lightweight sheet which is less expensive than the standard sheet ordinarily used.

The standard sheet weighs 16 ounces a square foot. The new sheet weighs 10 ounces. This, obviously, reduces the price, since copper is sold by weight.

This year, Fire Prevention Week offered the motto, "Fire destroys life, property, progress, prosperity." That minimizes the consequences of fire, rather than exaggerating them. Fire is the enemy of our homes, of our industries, of our communities, of the lives of our loved ones. Fire prevention is their friend and protector. Don't forget—make each week Fire Prevention Week so far as you are concerned.

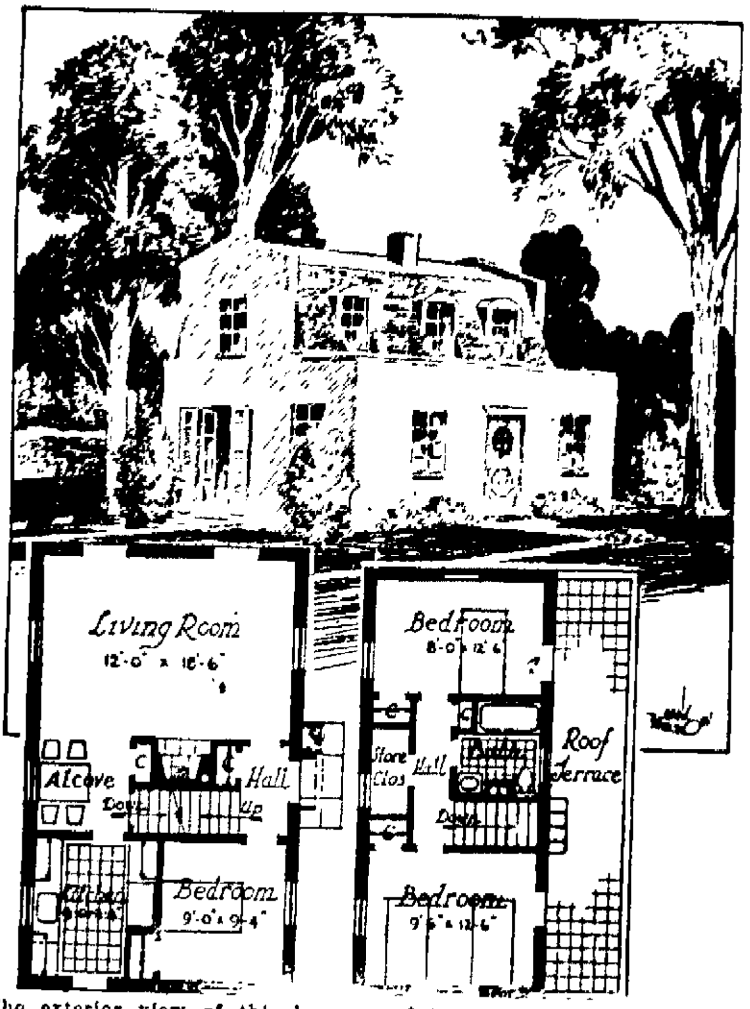
Striking—From Every Angle

Plus Pleasant Arrangement of Windows and Doorway



The exterior view of this house offers a striking effect from almost every angle, with the front a pleasant arrangement of windows, doorway and spacing.

Inside, a large living room is the chief feature of the first floor, with a dining alcove and a kitchen conveniently located. There is also a bedroom tucked away in one corner, with two windows for light and air. In the center is the stairway leading up to the second floor and down to the basement. A terrace off the living room completes this ensemble.

The second floor offers two more bedrooms, with a bathroom conveniently located to serve both, and a roof terrace with egress from both bedrooms. The basement offers heating plant location and storage space. A garage may be added in the future to balance the terrace.

The foundation is of concrete block. Floor framing is of pre-cast concrete. Windows are of stock steel. Interior partitions are double core steel studs with plaster board.

Landscaping is an essential feature of the design, and should be borne in mind when the plot is chosen. Frank J. Forster is the architect, and the house was submitted to the New York chapter of the American Institute of Architects' low cost house competition.

Home Construction Notes

Foundation Walls

(Note.—The Federal Housing Administration, through the mutual insurance of mortgages, is interested in good construction practice, for sound building is essential to long-term mortgage finance. This is the seventh in a series of articles which will contain general statements concerning good construction practice, but will not establish definite standards for dwellings insured by the Federal Housing Administration.)

Building units vary greatly in strength, as they are made by thousands of manufacturers of all degrees of competence. If they are to be used for your foundation walls, insist that they be made by some manufacturer who has a reputation for turning out good material. If your wall is buried not more than 5 feet below grade level, units 8 inches thick are all right, but for walls deeper than that 12-inch units should be used.

The mortar should be a rich cement mixture, and should be spread carefully and evenly on all bearing surfaces of the units, and the vertical joints between the units should be completely filled, that is, unless there are two separate mortar beds with a space between. In most localities, walls built of concrete units are less expensive than solid concrete walls.

Where unusual ground conditions occur—for instance, if the house is built into the side of a hill, or the ground is not very solid—it is better to use the poured walls.

Where these units, or brick or stone, are used for foundation walls, the mortar joints are the important points to consider. A brick or stone or cement unit wall is no better than its joints.

In stone walls, the filling of all the crevices with mortar takes especial care, on account of the irregularity of the surfaces of the stone.

Brick walls should be 12 inches thick below grade, and stone walls from 16 to 24 inches thick, depending upon whether the stones have flat surfaces or are round.

Stone and brick, where the walls are exposed above grade, make a pleasing appearance, particularly with the older types of architecture.

The walls of areas around cellar windows and the sides of outside cellar stairs should be securely tied to the main cellar walls. In poured cellar walls this can be done by placing steel reinforcing rods in the main walls at the time of pouring, with their ends projecting. When the area walls are built these exposed rods are imbedded in them and tie them to the foundations. The same method can be used in walls built of building units, or the walls of the areas can be built at the same time as the main walls and the units of each bonded or interlaced.

HOME BUYING and BUILDING

General Standards

(Note.—This is the twentieth in a series of articles pertaining to the mutual mortgage insurance plan of the National Housing Act. For specific information on any particular subject or for previous articles in this series, write to the Federal Housing Administration, Washington, D. C.)

As outlined in the previous article, Federal Housing Administration property standards are designed to encourage improvement in housing standards and conditions. While this obligation permits the Administration to view property standards from considerations of the security and well-being of the occupants of dwellings entirely apart from the factors involved in the safety of the investment itself, it is the conviction of the Administration that, in long-term investment, the qualities which produce satisfactory social conditions also tend to insure economic soundness.

The standards encompass not only the design, planning, accommodation, construction and services and equipment of the structure itself, but the placement of the structure on its property, the property in relation to its surroundings, and the character of the neighborhood. The consideration of these elements will greatly aid the prospective home owner, for each requirement has been carefully studied by an expert in that field. By following them, the home owners protect what is frequently the largest investment he will make during a lifetime.

In cases where local requirements contain more stringent provisions than those set forth by the Federal Housing Administration, the latter's rulings will never lower the local standards, but will insist that they be followed. In addition, the Administration attempts to work with local requirements in the instances where they are lower and makes special studies on these matters to determine whether or not requests for changes have any basis.

The next article will deal with the neighborhood standards which have been set forth as minimums as well as those which are desirable and should be considered by the individual who wishes to buy or build a home.

Circular No. 2, Property Standards, is available for those who request it at local insuring offices and the main office of Federal Housing Administration in Washington, D. C.

HOUSING QUESTION BOX

Q.—How can I remove mildew on a surface which is to be repainted?

A.—Wash the surface with a strong soap solution to which household ammonia has been added. Flush the surface with clean water and allow several days for it to dry. Some paints resist mildew better than others. Investigate the types of paint beforehand.

Q.—The inside wall surface and floors of my house show signs of "sweating". Can I prevent this?

A.—If there is no sign of leakage, the moisture on your walls and floor is probably caused by condensation. This varies with the temperature of the wall or floor as related to the room temperature, the humidity, and the flow of air currents. In a room containing warm, moist air, condensation may occur if the inner wall or floor surfaces are cooler than the air. Remedy this either by furring out the inner wall or by placing insulation between the inner and outer walls. In the case of the floors lay an additional floor over the present one, raising it sufficiently to allow air to circulate below it.

Q.—I should like to use the space in my bathroom now occupied by a radiator for a linen cabinet. Are there space-saving radiators available for bathrooms?

A.—There are several types of radiators that are very well suited for use in bathrooms and other rooms where space is at a premium. You may use the concealed or recessed type of radiator. Your heating contractor will be glad to explain to you how the concealed type of radiator may be set in the wall of the bathroom where it will be entirely out of the way. If you do not wish to have the radiator set in the wall, you have the option of choosing one of the small free-standing radiators which come in a variety of sizes. Still another alternative is to use a very thin wall-type radiator.

Q.—Would it be advisable for me to insulate the roof of my house before winter, and what type should I use?

A.—In the ordinary house, about one-fifth of the heat is lost in winter will be through the roof, while during the summer outside heat will enter the upper part of the house.

Adequate insulation will overcome both of these difficulties.

The kind of insulation to be used as well as the method of application will depend on the design of the house and the roof.

When an attic is open and usable as storage space but need not have a finished surface, insulation can be placed between the rafters or supported by a wire network, depending on the type used. For a finished room, plaster board or wall board may be nailed to the under edges of the rafters and loose insulation poured or packed into this space, or insulated wall board used.

If the attic is not used, insulating material can be laid between the floor beams.

There are many different types on the market, and you will readily be able to determine the best for your particular condition. Concerning the cost, you may take competitive bids and make final choices from the lowest and dependable bidder.

Q.—The location of my hot-water tank seems to cause the water to cool in a very short time. Can I remedy this?

A.—Hot water will remain hot for long periods in a tank covered with an insulating jacket, and fuel will be saved.

The insulation should not be dense, for it will have little value. It should be porous and contain air spaces. Ready-made jackets of sizes to fit standard tanks are available.

A jacket can be made of ordinary corrugated board. This is wrapped tightly around the tank in a number of layers, adjoining layers being pasted together. The top is covered with disks to fit. The outside can be covered with muslin and painted.

Neglect of Property Increasing Fire Hazard

The neglect of property which was caused by depression conditions and which adds to the ever-present danger of fire more than offset any growing consciousness in recent years on the part of American citizens of the value of fire prevention, according to the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

While annual fire losses for the years 1931, 1932 and 1933 are less in dollars-and-cents value than those of the preceding five years, the board points out that this is due largely to the tremendous write-off in property values which occurred during this period. Studies do not substantiate the conclusion that the lower annual loss is the result of more effective fire prevention and protection.

By the same token, the board's statisticians declare, the great increase in the United States' annual fire loss from 1926 until 1930 was due largely to the enormous total of burnable values created by the boom in building and the augmented wealth and population of the Nation. Property destroyed in 1930, for example, amounted to $501,981,000, as compared with $172,033,206 in 1915.

Stoves Close To Wall Source of Many Fires

Stoves, furnaces, and pipes set too close to walls cause nearly $20,000,000 worth of damage in the United States every year.

Nearly all of these fires are preventable, authorities state, and this vast loss could be measurably reduced if attention is paid to (1) placing and (2) use of heating and cooking equipment.

It is a danger signal when paint starts to blister or begins to turn brown on some wall or ceiling which is too near a stove or pipe. Often the charring goes on slowly until at last on some cold night when there is an extra hot fire it bursts into flames. Such fires are exceptionally dangerous, for they often break out at night and cause loss of life.

Common sense is all that is necessary to prevent them. All stoves and furnaces, heating pipes, and stovepipes should be placed far enough from walls to prevent overheating or the walls should be covered with a non-combustible material.

In the basement or where out of sight the furnace, stoves, or pipes should be insulated with an incombustible insulating material. This prevents them from radiating heat, which not only cuts down the danger of their igniting nearby materials, but also cuts down fuel bills.

HOMES BENEFITTED BY "OVER-ROOFING"

Homes that are growing old, and are badly in need of remodeling can be vastly improved in appearance, sales value and added insulation from heat and cold, by directly over-roofing the old roof with new shingles.

In reroofing, labor and expense of removing the old roof is eliminated. The ease of applying the new shingles is materially increased and of great importance is the fact that there will be no litter falling on shrubbery which will frequently injure costly planting beyond recovery. During the process of reroofing, the interior of the house is protected from damage by rains for the old roof will act as a protective covering during the process.

Many types of roofing materials may be satisfactorily applied over old roofs.

The Federal Housing Administration modernization loans for work of this kind.

Store Traffic

Many large store owners are taking advantage of modernization loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration to add escalators. This is a great aid in solving the traffic problem encountered in the modern store. This method of transportation adds sales. Displays facing the escalator should represent the merchandise offered on that floor. The passenger has a chance to see these displays and finds it easier to shop at each floor to inspect the articles offered.

Selection of Trees

In selecting trees for planting about a residence, take care that those chosen combine the greatest natural beauty with a hardiness and freedom from disease and insect pests in the location where they are to be planted.

The form of the tree should be appropriate for the position it is to occupy.

Native trees are equally advisable for the reason that they are known to flourish under the soil and climatic conditions of the region.

Streamlined Wallpapers to Improve Home

The increasing demand for wallpapers which are in full harmony with modern trends in furniture and decoration has led to considerable "streamlining" of papers. Wallpapers with stripes as a dominant feature and hung around a room instead of up and down the walls as in the traditional manner. This gives the "horizontality" which is an underlying feature of modern decoration and architectural design. It also reduces the number of seams on a wall and speeds paperhanging.

The 1936 lines now being assembled by wallpaper dealers throughout the country contain many new and striking patterns which appeal to "moderns" and to those who favor the modern adaptations of the classic themes. These, like the purely modern designs, are noted for their restraint and beauty, in contrast to the "over-decoration" that typified early ventures into this field.

Throughout the country manufacturers show optimism as wallpaper sales figures reveal an increase not only in rollage volume but in the quality of the merchandise demanded. Women are insisting more and more on style in the items that clothe their homes.

Raw Materials' Value In War and Their Quest Receiving Attention

Washington, Oct. 16 (AP).—The quest for raw materials, a hunt which often has set nations at each other's throats, is receiving new attention as the world ponders the causes of war.

Secretary Hull's speech yesterday advocating an international agreement to pluck up one root of war by assuring that "all important raw materials will become available on reasonable terms wherever they are needed," recalled that in other world capitals, too, leaders have urged that the problem be tackled.

The idea was discussed recently by Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign minister; it was treated at the London Economic Conference in 1933, and was before the League of Nations in 1920. So far, however, nothing concrete has been done about it.

Ambassador August Rosso, Italy's envoy to Washington, recently said that in 1920 his country presented a comprehensive plan for international control of raw materials to the League of Nations, but it has remained in a pigeon-hole. Rosso has cited Italy's need for raw materials as one justification for the campaign in Ethiopia.

Sir Samuel Hoare in his speech before the League on September 11, pledged Great Britain's support to a raw materials survey with the following explanation:

"Abundance of supplies and of raw materials appears to give particular advantage to countries possessing them. It is not unnatural that such a state of things should give rise to fears lest exclusive monopolies be set up at the expense of those countries that do not possess colonial empires. * * * * * *"

The London Economic Conference took the most positive action so far in attempting to solve the raw materials question. It passed this resolution outlining the principles to which international agreement on the coordination of production and marketing of commodities should conform:

"It should be fair to all parties, both producers and consumers; it should be designed to secure and maintain a fair and renumerative price level; it should not aim at discriminating against a particular country; and it should as far as possible be worked with the willing cooperation of consuming interests in importing countries who are equally concerned with producers in the maintenance of regular supplies at fair and stable prices."

T. R., King Albert Honored Big Jim

Grand Canyon, Ariz. (AP)—In the deep gorge of the Grand Canyon a distinguished Supai Indian, attired more often in frock coat and top hat than in blankets and feathers, guides the destiny of his tribe.

He is Gwetva (meaning whiskers), better known as "Big Jim," a sub-chief, whose fancy raiment was a gift of President Theodore Roosevelt.

When the former President came to the Grand Canyon years ago to hunt mountain lions he was greatly impressed with Big Jim, and the Indian was attracted by the chief executive's frock coat and top hat. Consequently, when the President departed, Gwetva's wardrobe was enriched by one frock coat and one top hat.

Gathered Medals

King Albert of the Belgians later visited the canyon, and Big Jim, acting as chamber of commerce for the Supais and attired in his prized frock coat and "topper," welcomed the monarch. The king was moved. He pinned a decoration on Gwetva's coat. And there it hangs today.

Some time later a chamber of commerce pinned a medal on the other side of Big Jim's chest to increase his importance.

Such possessions are not for every day wear, and Big Jim packs them away in a gunny sack for special events. The sack of finery is brought along when he leaves the canyon but not opened until he reaches the outskirts of the village.

Big Jim doesn't know his own age exactly, but he was born at Indian Gardens in the Grand Canyon, and has lived there, 3,500 feet below the rim of the canyon, during his 78 years or more.

Never Crossed River

Born on the south bank of the Colorado river, Jim has never crossed to the north bank, 300 feet distant.

"No go, bad water," he replied when asked why he had never crossed the stream.

The Supais once were a powerful tribe of hunters who roamed the Coconino plateau, but they now number only 186.

While snow falls on the high plateau above, Gwetva sleeps comfortably under a fig tree on the canyon floor. Big airliners speeding to the east and the west soar overhead, but Big Jim stirs, gazes skyward, then indifferently resumes his slumbers.

Gwetva, better known as "Big Jim," sub-chief of the Supai Indians, has lived in the Grand Canyon 78 years or more but never crossed the Colorado river.

The Junior High School

Editor,
Freeman:

To the home owners and taxpayers of Kingston:

Your attention is called to the plan of the Board of Education to build a Junior High School. The Board has applied to the Federal government for a loan to help build the school and the application has been acted on favorably. This means that unless sufficient objection is made a school will be built, the government paying 45 per cent of the contract price, approximately $400,000, and the taxpayers 55 per cent and probably more when all incidentals are considered.

As home owners pay the bulk of all the taxes this means that you will be called upon to pay at least $500,000 plus about $15,000 a year interest.

As a business proposition, this school will benefit few residents of Kingston but as an act of charity in providing facilities for non-residents it is a fine thing.

The question then is, do you, the majority, want to be taxed for the above amount. The mayor has planned to reduce the general tax for the next few years. This new school might overbalance all the saving. If you object you should protest before it is too late. You only have to pay the bill.

Roosevelt Inspects Panama Canal Today

En Route with President Roosevelt, Panama Canal Zone, Oct. 16 (AP).—President Roosevelt, as an old neighbor, inspected this vital waterway today.

Having crossed the canal last year, he was interested on this trip in viewing its fortifications and supplementary features. He invited President Harmodio Arias of Panama and Senora De Arias for a visit aboard the U. S. S. Houston before starting a motor trip to Madden dam.

The President also arranged for a luncheon at Fort Clayton where he was to review the troops before reboarding the Houston in the middle of the canal to continue the trip to the Atlantic.

The President has not yet announced just what route the Houston will follow on the trip back to continental United States and it was believed likely that he would take a couple of days to visit the West Indies for fishing.

FALL FESTIVAL OF ENTERTAINMENT OUTLINED

Plans are going forward for the Fall Festival of Entertainment which is being presented by the Young Married Women's Club of the Y. W. C. A. and the consistory of the Fair Street Reformed Church during four Fridays of November, beginning November 8. All the affairs will be held at the Fair Street Church, and the program is so varied that the organizations feel that it will be of interest to all ages and groups.

The opening entertainment will be given by the Petrie Instrumental Quintet, and will consist of an evening of music with brasses, violin, and piano. They will use 13 instruments and the program includes both serious and lighter music. Mr. Petrie, the leader of the group, is an experienced musician, having been cornet soloist with John Philip Sousa for many years.

The second program on November 15, will be given by Noah Beilharz, impersonator. His characterizations will include sketches from both great characters in history and people in more ordinary walks of life.

The program on November 22 will be a lecture on "The Machine Age" by Charles Howard Plattenburg, world traveler and a former member of the Iowa legislature. Mr. Plattenburg is not only an entertaining speaker, but presents current affairs and problems with a natural sense of humor, and leaves his listeners feeling they have also gained inspiration from a constructive leader and student of present-day questions.

The closing entertainment will be the presentation of the play, "Paupers and Pews." Tickets for the course may be obtained from members of the Young Married Women's Club, or of Fair Street Church, or at the Y. W. C. A. for a very nominal cost.

Butcher Faces First Degree Murder Trial

Salt Lake City, Oct. 16 (AP).—First degree murder charges which might send him before Utah's firing squad, were on file today against Pascall L. Boyer, accused slayer of three persons.

Prosecutor Orlando Bowman of Davis county filed the charges late yesterday, after a coroner's jury had returned three complaints accusing the 31-year-old butcher of the slayings Sunday night.

Sheriff Joseph Holbrook said he would keep Boyer in the jail here until he is tried, "to avoid trouble."

There had been heard threats of mob violence at Farmington, Davis county seat, and at Bountiful a rural community at the foot of the Wasatch mountain range, where the slayings took place.

The slain were Mrs. Blanche Nelson, a restaurant employe, who had refused to "date" Boyer, and a farm couple, Mr. and Mrs. John L. East.

The prisoner declared that he would "never go to trial" and an extra guard was posted to prevent possible suicide attempts.

Sam Hardy Dead, Was Veteran Actor

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 16 (AP)—Sam Hardy, veteran actor of the stage and screen, died in Hollywood Hospital early today after an emergency operation for an abdominal ailment.

The 52-year-old player, best known for his humorous, gambler-type portrayals, collapsed on a studio set yesterday as he made up for scenes in an Eddie Cantor picture.

Cantor and Norman Taurog, the director, rushed him to the hospital, where it was decided to operate for an intestinal obstruction.

As a result of his collapse and death, Samuel Goldwyn, the producer, said much of the Cantor picture completed so far will be scrapped, because Hardy appeared in most of the scenes.

Hardy, a native of New Haven, Conn., had many years of stage experience before he entered the movies with the old Lubin Film Company.

The next regular meeting of the association will be held in Kingston, in the Weiner Hose Co. rooms, at the Central Fire Station.

May Make Application For Liquor License

The Ulster County A. B. C. Board announces that it is permitted to receive applications for liquor licenses from October 21 to 31, inclusive, from anyone, with certain exceptions, who is operating a duly qualified hotel, restaurant or club as defined by the state liquor law. It is stated that after October 31 the ban will again be placed on liquor licenses for an indefinite period.

The announcement is based on a resolution adopted by the State Liquor Authority on October 8, providing that "applications for on premises liquor licenses may be received by all local boards during the period from October 21 to and including October 31."

County Treasurer Was Busy Tuesday

Tuesday was the last day to pay taxes without the imposition of interest and County Treasurer Pratt Boice and his assistants had a busy day. The extension of time without interest charges was a much appreciated thing for a great many people who through the extension were able to pay taxes which otherwise would not have been paid.

Monday was one of the biggest days the county treasurer has ever experienced in point of number of taxes paid. The office was open until near midnight clearing up the routine work and getting books completed before closing the day's business.

From now on the back taxes may be paid but there will be added the interest charges from February. An extension of time without the payment of interest was authorized by the Board of Supervisors until October 15. This was on resolution of Supervisor Elsworth who comes from the town of Esopus where many farmers depend upon their fruit crops for funds. In order to give the taxpayers all possible time the county treasurer was authorized to accept taxes without penalty until midnight on Tuesday and the fact that so many people responded shows the experiment was a good one.

Woman—Does your husband ever pay you compliments?
Neighbor—Well, sometimes he says, "You're a nice one."

Good works are expensive. To provide a dollar for the deserving you must provide nine more for the chiselers.

Prospective Tenant—But you advertised a bed-sitting room?
Landlord—Certainly. This is it!
Prospective Tenant—Well, I see the bed, but where's the sitting room?
Landlord—On the bed.

Old Ragson Tatters from Brushville said. "I never pay more than ten cents for a handkerchief. That's all I can afford to blow in."

Teacher—Junior, come up here and give me what you've got in your mouth.
Junior—I wish I could—it's the toothache.

There isn't any flaw in the Golden Rule; the weak spot is in the human nature.

Relief Agent—They tell me you have a model husband.
Woman—Yes—but he ain't a workin' model. He's just a blueprint.

Friend—Mine never misses his small change, either.

Girl—My family refuses to let me marry you.
Boy Friend—Do they object to my standing?
Girl—No—to your staggering.

Katty—Yes, even the Lord couldn't make better ones.

And despite old sorrows and older sinning,

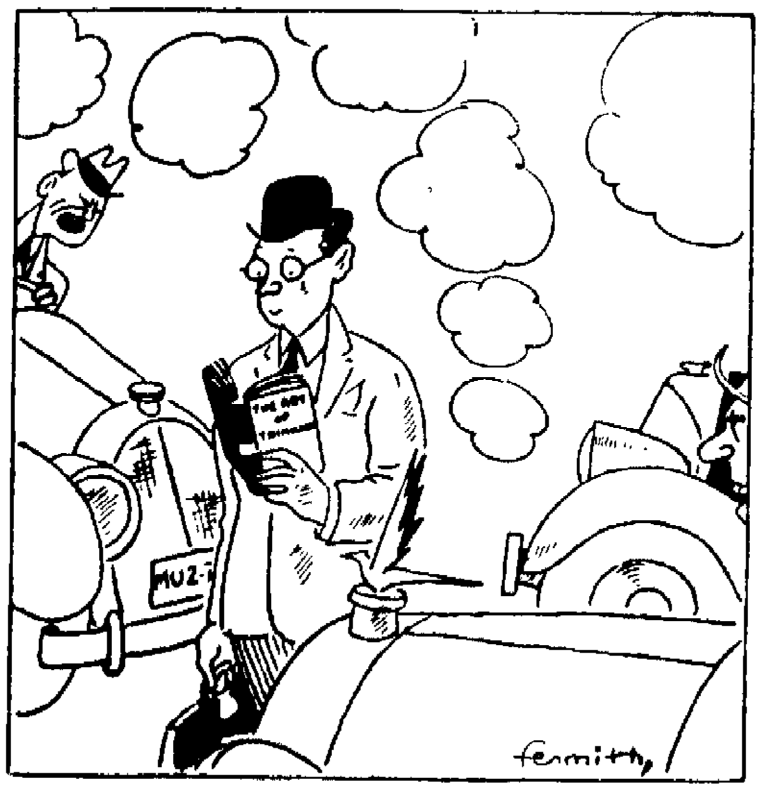
Cross At Intersections!



Year by year the deadly traffic toll reaches new peaks. In the thick of the battle to reduce this loss of life are state Motor Vehicle Administrators. Twelve of them, officers and members of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, have contributed a series of articles describing the major causes of automobile accidents. Number Twelve in the series: "Cross at Intersections" follows:

By ARTHUR MAGEE
Acting Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, New Jersey
Member, American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators

THE intersection is the place to cross the street. Thousands lose their lives or are seriously injured every year through failure to follow this simple rule. There were 16,000 pedestrians killed in automobile accidents in this country last year. One in every four was killed crossing between intersections, according to figures compiled by a member company of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters. There were 270,000 pedestrians injured and one in four was injured crossing between intersections.

There is also a right and wrong way to cross at intersections. Cross with the signal. A green light means "go" to the pedestrian as well as the vehicle. Last year, 1,100 pedestrians were killed crossing against the signal as compared to 190 killed crossing with it. The most dangerous corners, of course, are those having no signals. More than 1,900 were killed at such intersections. With the appalling figures that have been quoted, the 1,600 killed coming from behind parked cars should also be mentioned.

These are an indication of the widespread jay-walking prevalent in a nation which prides itself on being wide awake and resouceful. All those working to further automobile safety are striving to impress the motorist with his obligation to the pedestrian. Nevertheless, the fact is that many accidents are the pedestrian's fault.

Moreover, the pedestrian must remember that he is at a disadvantage. Being in the right will avail his flesh and bones nothing against moving steel. The pedestrian is almost completely safe from automobiles while on the sidewalk. When he steps off the curb to cross the street, the burden of his own protection falls on himself. He should cross at intersections. He should cross with the signal. He should always look. When crossing where there is no signal light, he should be doubly careful. If he does these things and waits till he can cross safely, there is little likelihood of a vehicle hitting him.

Beginning at the most westerly bounds of the lands of the City of New York, on the northerly and left bank of the Esopus Creek at the Shandaken tunnel outlet, at Allaben, and running from thence in a southerly direction along, over or through Parcels Numbers 1 to 105, inclusive, the latter parcel adjoining the lands of the City of New York Ashokan Reservoir taking. Town of Marlborough School Districts to Have Central School

A central school district is to be erected in the town of Marlborough. The voters in the present districts—Nos 1 to 7 inclusive—so decided at election held in St. James hall, Milton, Tuesday. The move apparently is a popular one as the vote stood 418 for, 148 against and five ballots spoiled. The election was held from 11 a. m. to 8 p. m. on Tuesday. Following the announcement of the vote a meeting was held for the election of a board of trustees for the newly authorized central district and the following were named: Edward J. McGowan, Marlborough; Calvin E. Staples, Sr., West Marlborough; John Cramer, Jr, Mt. Zion; Claude Hepworth, Milton, Edgar M. Clarke, Lattingtown.

Another meeting must be held shortly to select a site for the main school building, which will be located in Marlborough, with a building to accommodate the first six grades, in Milton.

The proposition for erecting a central district has been more or less actively discussed for six years past The move was first given impetus by J. H. Tuthill, when he was president of the Marlborough Board of Education. Later he was injured, retired from the presidency and nothing much was done until John A. Simpson became president of the Board in 1932 and took an active interest in the matter. Mr. Simpson retired from the board last December when he removed to Kingston, where he is freight agent for the New York Central and West Shore roads.

Mr. Simpson said when seen this morning that the new district plans to spend $371,426 on new buildings and equipments. Of this amount a PWA allotment of $167,141 has been granted.

Architect Gerard Betz of Kingston has prepared some preliminary plans that will allow of work being started on the new building as soon as a site is approved. The district has an assessed valuation of over $2,000,000 and there about 800 pupils, according to Mr. Simpson.

KINGSTON POST AUXILIARY WILL MEET FRIDAY NIGHT.

The regular monthly meeting of the Auxiliary Unit of Kingston Post will be held Friday evening, October 18, in the Memorial Building, at which time Mrs. Alice D'Algie, the newly elected president, will preside at her first meeting. A spirited membership race is on between the Post and Auxiliary as to which one will have the largest paid up membership for the meeting on Friday night, and the progress that has been made will be reported at that time. A large attendance of the Auxiliary members is expected at the meeting to greet the new president and to hear her plans for the year.

Volunteer Firemen Met in New Paltz

The regular monthly meeting of the Ulster County Volunteer Firemen Association was held in New Paltz Tuesday evening where the association was the guest of the New Paltz Fire Department.

Captain Paul Babcock of Nyack gave a demonstration of fire extinguishers and also gave an address on salvage work.

Chief Chris Noll of Poughkeepsie delivered a very fine address on firemen training schools and went into detail on the different methods used in the training schools throughout the state. These schools are free to any volunteer or paid fireman and the Association is going to endeavor to have such a school established in Kingston for the benefit of the volunteer firemen of Ulster county.

Ex-chief William H. Frank spoke regarding county organization and its relation to the Hudson Valley and State Associations Chief Frank also brought before the Association some matters relating to the Firemen's Home at Hudson Chief Joseph L. Murphy then brought up his questions for discussion which relate to firefighting This topic is now a part of each meeting.

The last speaker of the evening was Judge Henry E. McKenzie of Port Ewen who spoke of the large attendance at the meeting and urged every one present to do their utmost in working for the betterment of the volunteer firemen

The Association will be the guest of Weiner Hose Company at their next meeting which will be held on November 19.

Edward F. Moran is president of this Association which comprises all the volunteer fire companies of the county.

Activity Noted at The Junior League Welfare Station Here

The full program of fall and winter activity is now under way at The Junior League Welfare Station on East O'Reilly street Baby and prenatal clinics under the expert supervision of Dr. Bibby and Dr Krom respectively, got into their stride nearly a month ago and the course in home nursing and dietetics given by the Junior League nurse, Miss Anna Cassidy, started this week

The Baby Welfare work conducted by this organization is the only thing of its kind in the city and provides expert supervision of the development of the future citizen from before birth until he reaches school age and is turned over to the school nurse This close watch maintained throughout the most critical period of his life does more to assure a well developed, well balanced adult to carry on the work of the city in the future than any institution or expensive corrective system in later life

The Welfare Station is open every morning from nine to ten when Miss Cassidy may be consulted by any mother or receive calls for cooperation from any other agency or even receive visitors interested in the work Visitors are also welcome to see the work being conducted at the clinics every first and third Tuesday of the month. Another feature of this work is the dispensing of cod-liver oil to those babies and mothers needing it and unable to afford it in order to maintain their resistance to infection during the winter

The Junior League also maintains a visiting book service at both of the hospitals in the city This is proving of inestimable value. Books and magazines are collected and dispensed once a week to all patients and since the demand for the service has grown so since its inception over a year ago, there is always a shortage of reading material. Therefore the league would appreciate it greatly if any one having novels or magazines which they have read would call Miss Brigham, telephone number 809 and someone will collect them immediately

Altogether this organization of young women is rendering splendid service to the community, not only in the work which they so efficiently carry on but since it is an organization of youth it is a training school or stepping stone for young women leaving school or college helping them to establish themselves in the worthwhile endeavors of the city so that when their work in the league is finished they are fitted to be leaders in any of the welfare projects of the community

Arthur Parks of 12 South Pine street was arrested yesterday by the police on a warrant sworn out by his wife charging him with being a disorderly person in failing to provide for the support of his family This morning in police court Judge Culloton directed Parks to contribute a certain amount weekly to his family

Martin Is Stalling, Said Matthew V. Cahill

"It's time for Mr. Martin to unload," declared Matthew V Cahill in an address last night at the Loyal Republican Club of the Sixth ward, "but the trouble is he hasn't anything to unload and that is why he's stalling." Speaking before this group Mr Cahill made a strong verbal attack upon the Democratic candidate for mayor regarding the use of the union insignia and charged that he was campaigning under camouflage of this label while in his own business he had lost the privilege of union membership by failure to live up to the rules "Now he will stand by that insignia as long as it will help, but that is all it means to him,' snapped Mr. Cahill to his attentive audience

Continuing he said, "Mr Martin has been using insidious and treacherous means to get the mayoralty chair One stunt that he pulled but didn t get away with was to have a law so that only volunteer firemen would be eligible to become paid firemen He tried to put Connie Heiselman on the spot because if Connie favored this measure he would have the people against him and if he opposed it the volunteer firemen would then oppose him Well, it was illegal from the beginning A Democratic opinion, I believe from the State Civil Service office in Albany, sent back the answer, 'no.'"

Turning to Martin's record as city assessor under a Democratic administration Mr Cahill stressed the jacking up of taxes by increased assessments after he had promised not to

"Watch out," warned the corporation counsel, "for a lot of ballyhoo hand bills on the day before election Martin probably won t say anything in public until then and at that time he will come out with a batch of handbills saying to "Elect Martin, because, because because ' and there will not be time for Heiselman or anyone else to answer back '

The Rev. Mr. Weaver Spoke

The Rev Ale Weaver was the next speaker and put before his audience the problems of the negro race and what this election means "We know Mr Martin cannot keep his promises,' he asserted "It is much better to keep Mayor Heiselman in office ' He told of the times that he had called on the Mayor in his office and how he was always received with a sincere welcome and whenever it was possible he always was successful in securing what he went after.

Cashin Next Speaker

John M. Cashin assistant United States District Attorney, stated that while he was not positive of his figures he understood that negro employes in Kingston s public works had been increased from seven to 23 since Heiselman took office Of the Mayor he stated that his hours of work each day varied between 12, 14, and even 16 so keen was he with his work and responsibility

"The Human Side"

"Let's look at the human side of this thing," stated George Moore, City Assessor, who admitted being active in the affairs of the city for the past 30 years.

"When Connie Heiselman was called into office after the resignation of Mayor Walker due to ill health, it meant leaving his position with the bank in which he was a most promising man. His bank told him one thing 'The one thing that confronts you" said the officers of the bank to Heiselman, 'is the welfare of 28,000 people. Not just your wife, your widowed mother, but every citizen in this city' So Connie Heiselman was put into office with that sense of civic pride and he has proven himself to be the best man for we 28,000 people"

John Melville, sanitary inspector who had charge of the meeting announced the general Republican meeting to be held on Thursday of this week at Modern Hall on Grand street when further issues of the campaign would be discussed

The seeds of cotton were once a waste and a nuisance Today, thanks to the organic chemist, the seeds in a billion and a half dollar cotton crop have a value of more than $200,000,000 to the farmer Development of a new outlet for cotton in road building which forecasts an annual demand of from two to three million bales, was only recently announced

Reporters Barred At Democratic Rally

The publicity man of the Sixth Ward Democratic Club on Tuesday "cordially invited the general public" to attend a meeting of the club at its rooms, corner of Hasbrouck avenue and St Mary's street, but when a local newspaper man walked into the meeting room he was politely informed that it was a closed meeting and the men of the press were not desired Among the speakers slated to speak that evening were William B Martin and Charles Burger the Democratic candidates for mayor and alderman-at-large.

Comforter Men's Club Hobby Show

Tuesday night the Church of The Comforter Men's Club presented its first "Hobby Show", and judging from the gratifying results, another will be held at some later date. There were approximately 15 separate displays of hobbies, showing a wide range of subject and material.

The first part of the evening was given over to a short business meeting of the club at which final plans for the annual minstrel show, which will be presented on the 19th and 20th of November, were made. Five teams were selected from the members to help make this annual event a success

The speaker of the evening, Sidney Clapp, president of the Colonial City Stamp Club, was introduced. Mr. Clapp opened his talk with a general statement concerning hobbies, making as the main point of his introduction the idea that the best way to really enjoy a hobby was to learn all possible about the subject. He mentioned the numerous hobbies in which he is interested and pointed out that much greater enjoyment can be had if a study is really made of the hobby. One of the interesting facts Mr. Clapp brought to light concerned the blue spruce trees that surround the Ashokan Water Supply system. He told that the parent trees of all of those blue spruces are growing on the grounds of the Schwarzwaelder Factory in Chichester. It seems that William Schwarzwaelder gave Mr. Clapp the cones from the tops of these two blue spruces at the factory, and from these cones there grew 14,000 trees which have since multiplied and can be seen by the thousands bordering the reservoir.

After this introduction, Mr. Clapp presented a very interesting talk on the subject of geology, offering specimens of formations from the shores of Labrador to the beaches of Florida. He exhibited some interesting Indian arrowheads, showing the difference between the war arrow and the hunting arrow, and also the different material which was used in the making of the points, some white quartz heads indicated that the arrow had no doubt belonged to some Indian from the vicinity of Long Island, while others were made from material found locally. Several pieces of stone that were almost perfectly cylindrical like a marble, showed the force that water can exert by constantly revolving one stone against another. Some fossils were among the collection which clearly showed vegetation as it existed a few million years ago.

After Mr. Clapp's interesting talk, the attention of the club was focused on the exhibits of the members. The Rev. W. F. Stowe showed a nice collection of covers and three old books. One of these books was an old Bible printed in German in the year 1529; another printed in Latin and English, dated back to 1670, while still a third was printed in 1778 in Holland-Dutch. Stamps were shown by Charles Keise and William Wood, while Donald Wood had some autumn leaves and drawings on view. Some baby photographs of the different members of the club caused much amusement as it was listed as the "Rogue's Gallery" and said to have been assembled by Samuel Williams. Some excellent examples of the art of wood-turning was presented by Frank Elmendorf and Arthur Floyd, both men having some fine specimens of table lamps made from different grained wood pieced together. Model airplanes were represented by Robert Hudler and Howard Nickerson, while Ray Nickerson displayed some very fine oil paintings of the surrounding countryside, and also two fine ship models, one being the old destroyer Preston and the other being an old time sailing vessel. Live stock had its place in the show when Gordon Craig, Jr., exhibted two New Hampshire Red pullets and cockerels. Model railroading had a part in the program, being represented by Henry Eighmey who had a train of the Ulster & Delaware, consisting of the engine, a combination coach, two freight cars and a caboose, strung out on the table. He also exhibited several old photographs of trains on the Ulster & Delaware and Ontario & Western railroads.

It is the hope of the program committee that a bigger and better hobby show can be held sometime later in the season. this show to contain many more exhibits and to have a better and more elaborate arrangement of the hobbies.

◆ New York, Oct 16 (AP)—Heavy profit taking put only a temporary dent in today's stock market as the rails and scattered specialties got behind the list with strong support.

The flood of offerings of recent industrial climbers at the opening again caused the ticker tape to drop behind floor transactions. Selling dried up later, however, and early declines of 1 to 3 points were pared or cancelled Despite the irregularity, a number of new highs for the year were scored.

Setbacks in conspicuous leaders were attributed almost wholly to technical influences War news failed to disturb particularly.

Grains were a bit backward, but cotton firmed Rail bonds took a turn for the better. Foreign exchanges were quiet.

Shares of Union Pacific rallied 4 points and Pullman, Spiegel-May-Stern and Celanese were up 2 each. Gainers of fractions to a point or so included N. Y. Central, Santa Fe, Delaware & Hudson, Great Northern, General Motors, U. S. Steel, Auburn, Bendix, Murray Corp., American Can, Eastman Kodak, Industrial Rayon, Schenley, Western Union, American Telephone and Consolidated Gas. Pressure on Chrysler was pronounced, but this favorite regained most of its early loss. Case dropped a point.

Early estimates of freight car loadings for the past week—The official figures will be published Friday—Place the total at around 750,000 cars This would be the highest aggregate since October, 1931, and would compare with 706,877 in the previous week and 635,639 in the like week of 1934.

The Rhinoceros

In every sense of the word the rhinoceros is a terrifying beast, and that fact makes him one of the most interesting. He weighs generally some four or five tons, and carries the most perfect suit of natural armor of all the animals. The horn of the rhinoceros has always been a source of interest. In the East, particularly, the belief still exists that it possesses magical properties. In the true sense it is not horn, being actually formed of hair which grows from the skin.

The highest peak in Westchester county, at Tarrytown, was the scene of the laying of a Cornerstone, October 15, marking the new administrative and dormitory building of Marymount College which has been under construction since last July. The site is that of the old Butler Hall which was razed in June. Monsignor Michael J. Lavelle, V. G., assisted by members of the clergy conducted the ceremony.

New Paltz Bank Thief Given 3 Year Term in Leavenworth Friday

Bonds stolen from the New Paltz bank on January 30 last brought to Frank Barnett, 41 years old, of 9 West Harrison street, Chicago, a three year term in Leavenworth prison under a new law recently enacted by Congress.

Barnett was sentenced by Federal Judge John P. Barnes of Chicago on October 11 to a three-year term in Leavenworth penitentiary for violation of the national stolen property act. Martin J. Ward and John Morocchi, assistant federal district attorneys, said this was the first conviction in Chicago under the new law, which makes it a federal offense to transport stolen goods over state lines.

Barnett was accused of possessing $23,000 in bonds taken in the robbery of the New Paltz bank on January 30. The stolen bonds began to appear in brokerage houses in Chicago the next month. They were traced to Robert L. Tunnison, 48 years old, of Rockdale, Ind., who confessed, implicating Barnett. Tunnison is to be sentenced later.

Doubts French Success

Rome, Oct. 16 (AP).—A government spokesman stated today that Italy was well aware of Premier Laval's efforts for a peaceful settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict—but doubted that the French statesman would succeed.

Italian officials were in agreement with Premier Mussolini's determination to conquer Ethiopia, no matter what happens.

As for the campaign in East Africa, it went ahead while authorities stated that Italy's willingness to refrain from bombing Addis Ababa, the capital, depended entirely upon the Ethiopians.

It was stated that this answer had been sent to the diplomatic representatives of foreign governments stationed in Addis Ababa who had interceded on behalf of their legations and national in the mountain city.

The government spokesman said Italy was not a party to any peace negotiations and had made no compromise offers to anyone.

In view of Breat Britain's attitude, he added, the Italian government regarded the possibility of there being any diplomatic solution acceptable to Italy as "remote."

The authoritative opinion was that Great Britain would yield no more to Italy than she previously had offered—"and why should we accept today what we rejected several weeks ago?" asked the official.

He declared that Italy was in a much better position today in view of her military successes in Ethiopia than at the time of the tri-partite conversations in Paris last month with France and Great Britain.

In any case, it was officially explained, no settlement would be acceptable which did not satisfy Italy's three demands: expansion, safety of her colonies, and the complete disarmament of Ethiopia.

Although Italy is willing to spare Addis Ababa from her air bombers, as she did Aksum, it was stated that such an assurance must not be seized upon by the Ethiopians as an invitation to concentrate troops in the vicinity.

In such an event, it was said, military necessities would have to take precedence over Italy's desire to treat the Ethiopian capital with consideration.

An official source stated that the Ethiopian people must discontinue what he called their practice of painting red crosses at random on the roofs of houses in the hope of forestalling bombardments.

He declared that when the Italian troops entered Aduwa practically every housetop was decorated with the Red Cross Society emblem and that Italy had protested against this practice to the League of Nations.

Italian Advance Pushed

Aduwa, Ethiopia, 4:30 p. m., Oct. 14—(Delayed)—The high pressure of road construction to the present front lines permitted the Italian northern armies today to push their advance toward the more important objective of Makale.

General Emilio De Bono, commander-in-chief of the Fascist forces in East Africa, left for field headquarters after receiving complete submission of the civil and religious authorities of Aksum, ancient capital and sacred city of Ethiopia.

Officers expected Marshal Pietro Badoglio, chief of the general staff, to come here shortly for a week, with the field headquarters to be moved closer to the front lines.

The new road over the mountains from Italy's colony of Eritrea to Aduwa, one of the first objectives achieved in the campaign of occupation, has just been completed.

No special resistance was expected in the drive on Makale, 60 miles south of Aduwa and a strategic caravan center on the route into the interior, because Degiac Haile Selassie Gugsa, governor of Makale, has come over to the Italian side.

Count Galeazzo Ciano, son-in-law of Premier Mussolini, made a scouting flight up to and 50 miles beyond Makale, and saw only scattered, small groups of Ethiopians who quickly fled to cover.

This morning, I met one of the chief men of this town and my conversation with him gave evidence of the attitude of some proportion of the population of Aduwa.

Law By Force

"How do the people feel about the Italian occupation?" I asked.

"They can't do anything but accept it," he replied. "It is law by force."

I saw the first heavy artillery batteries going over the mountains toward Aduwa—heavy pieces which could have destroyed this city, had they been brought into line.

Aduwa is booming under Italian domination. Prices are soaring to a point where the Aduwans are quickly becoming millionaires in their own estimation.

They now charge ten lire (about 80 cents) for a bottle of beer—four times the cost of beer in Rome.

Prisoners taken by the Italians are being kept behind barbed wire entanglements at field headquarters. They are living in improvised huts which they constructed themselves.

Camp authorities said they would be put to work shortly on road construction.

These prisoners, most of them taken in the early advance on Aduwa, are part of the total of 500 Ethiopians thus far captured by the Italian troops.

Admits No Defeat

By JAMES A. MILLS

Addis Ababa, Oct. 16—Emperor Haile Selassie proclaimed today that Ethiopia is undefeated on any front.

Italian occupation of Aduwa and Aksum, he declared, was without military significance, the Ethiopians having withdrawn for special strategic reasons.

The emperor asserted the Fascists were permitted to enter these cities on the northern front unopposed, that no decisive battle had yet been fought and that none would be until the Italians approached Ethiopia's real defensive positions in the towering mountains of the interior.

Government officials, denying reports published abroad that Ras Nesiby was ordered to take the offensive on the southern Ogaden desert front, asserted:

"An offensive on any front is contrary to all our carefully worked out plans. We stand pat in defending our land.

"If there is any offensive, the Italians must take the initiative. We cannot afford to waste ammunition in the desert or lowlands."

Revolt Is Denied

The government reiterated denials of a revolt in Gojjam province and desertions in Tigres, adding that the governor of Gojjam, Ras Emeru, is a cousin of Haile Selassie and one of his most loyal followers. The desertion of Haile Selassie Gugsa with his retinue of 100 was admitted, but his defection was held to be unimportant.

The Italians are unlikely to make Gugsa king in the northern area, the emperor said, because of the opposition of the other chiefs to the deserter. Gugsa was held by the emperor responsible for the cutting off of the only telegraph line from the capital to the northern front.

A spokesman explained that in the absence of telegraph communications, the government radio operators are receiving only scant news from the front, which he held responsible for "downright fabrications" by correspondents in their reports.

Ethiopian authorities rejoiced in a belief that Italy's northern army was slowly but surely falling into a trap.

Ethiopians said it would not be long before General Emilio De Bono's Fascist forces, jubilant over the "capture" of Aduwa and Aksum, would find themselves lost in the maze of ravines, cavernous valleys and mountain fastnesses which form the northern bulwark of Emperor Haile Selassie's domain.

On all sides the comment was heard that once the Italians reached the forbidding interior of Ethiopia, the warriors of Ras Seyoum, commander in the north, would waste no time in carrying out a long cherished plan to attack.

Capital advices, however, indicated that both the Italian and Ethiopian forces were playing for time, each wondering what the other's next move would be.

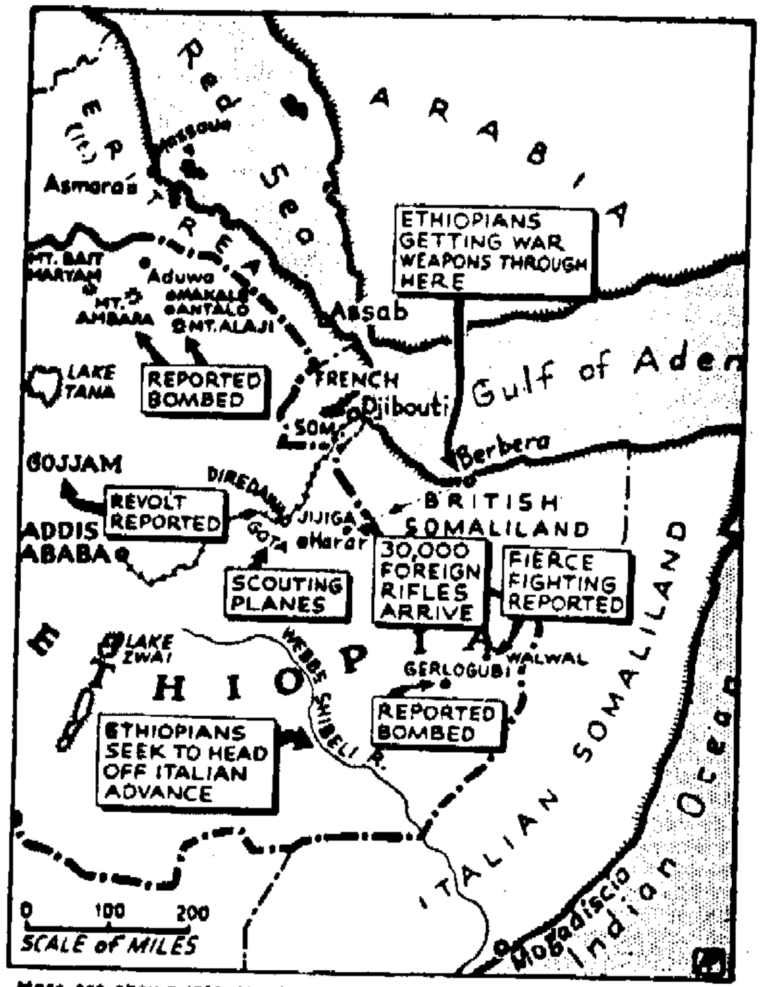
ITALIANS ATTACK IN EARNEST



Here are shown late developments in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict. Reports indicated the Italians were attacking strongly along the southern Ethiopian frontier as thousands of native troops rushed to battle them. Meantime, Ethiopia's hopes were much strengthened by arrival of foreign war weapons, made possible by lifting of the arms embargo against her.

American League's 6-Club Roster Expected To Produce More Action

The American Basketball League at its fall meeting decided to limit its circuit for 1935-1936 to the Brooklyn Visitations, New York Jewels, Philadelphia Hebrews, Paterson, N. J., Panthers, Kingston, N. Y., City Service and Jersey, N. J., Reds. The New Haven, Conn., team which had been accepted earlier in the summer, was dropped last week due to inability to properly arrange its managerial difficulties.

With the reduced roster of six clubs, the resultant exhibitions should be more evenly waged than has been true for a number of years, as almost all clubs have been afforded an opportunity to strengthen their lineup with the stars heretofore allotted to New Haven.

Every effort will be made to oust the Brooklyn Visitations from their perch as World's Champions with the other five clubs starting with greatly improved rosters. The New York Jewels and Philadelphia Hebrews have proven during the past two years they were equally as strong as Brooklyn and with additional help from the other three clubs the race gives every promise of being a tight one from beginning to end.

Kingston, winners of the New York State League championship in 1934-1935 and making its first appearance in the American League circuit, will be represented by an outstanding array of talent. Manager Morgenweck of the Kingston team has gone far in his efforts to build up this imposing group, including some new faces imported from Indiana.

The Paterson, N. J., Panthers have secured a combination of the brilliant stars who last year played with Boston and Newark, headed by the great Benny Borgeman, point scoring marvel, and with operations to be held in a cage court, Paterson appears headed for the heights of years ago when it was the greatest basketball town with the greatest basketball team in the country.

The Jersey Reds will function this season with Phil "Mugsy" Miller as the directing genius, and they also are looking forward to a return of the fine form of two years ago when they were regarded as one of the strongest quintets in the wheel.

The schedule will be divided into two sections, opening on Saturday, November 2, with the first half terminating on January 8, and the second division finishing March 14.

John J. O'Brien, of Rockville Centre, L. I., was again reelected president and secretary and treasurer.

High School Varsity-Alumni Play Saturday

The Maroon and White squad held its first practice yesterday in preparation for the Alumni tilt this coming Saturday.

The game is expected to attract a great amount of interest among the local fans. After the Liberty game, it appeared that the Alumni would walk all over the Varsity, but since the Varsity's good showing at Schenectady last week, most of the fans are hesitant in expressing opinions.

It is expected that the second and third string men will see quite a bit of action Saturday. Coach Kiaa will probably not risk breaking up his Varsity players on this non-league game, with Middletown looming up in the distance. The Middies trounced Mount Pleasant two weeks ago, and last week they took over a strong Poughkeepsie eleven to the tune of 32-0.

Several members of the squad are nursing minor injuries, but everyone is expected to be in top shape for Saturday's game.

The starting time for the game is 2:30.

After Middletown, the Maroon takes on Port Jervis, Poughkeepsie, Newburgh, in that order.

ALL BIG GOLFERS GATHER AT OKLAHOMA CITY

Oklahoma City, Oct. 16 (AP).—The nation's professional golf stars, here for the National P. G. A. tournament, took their final warm-up today on a course that commanded respect for its exactness.

The general opinion of the Twin Hills course, over which the battle for the professional crown starts tomorrow, was summed up by Paul Runyan, the defending champion.

"I enjoyed it very much," said the 140-pound package of golfing dynamite after turning in a 71, one over par. "It is all a matter of direction. It is a very tight course, not long, but it requires great accuracy."

There were all the big names in golf—Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Leo Diegel, Horton Smith, Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee; Craig Wood, Deal, N. J.; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., the nation's low scorer for the year, and a host of others.

The official entry list was 122. It contained all the members of the Ryder Cup team. Only Olin Dutra of Chicago was missing today.

ROCHESTER TO ENTER THE INTERNATIONAL HOCKEY

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP).—Mickey Roach, manager and coach of the Rochester Cardinals, newest entry in the International Hockey League, said today the team will receive support from the New York Americans of the National League during the coming season.

Preparations for the coming season were opened with the purchase of seven Minneapolis puck chasers as the nucleus of the Rochester team. The team will get players from the New York club on option.

Kansas City—Everette Marshall, 222, La Junta, Colo., tossed Terry McGinnis, 212, New York, 19:27.

Hobart Is Showing Up Better This Year

Geneva, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP).—Hobart College's football team, once a candidate for the doubtful honor of being the "world's losingest," today stands like an oasis in the gridiron desert, New York state's only undefeated small college eleven that has met stiff competition since the season's start.

Also unbeaten are the larger Syracuse, Columbia and N. Y. U. and the little New York Aggies, but all have feasted on "warmups" that didn't require first class play.

Losing streaks belong to Buffalo, R. P. I., and Cornell, all with three defeats and no victories, but the Bisons and Engineers have failed to break into the scoring column like the "Big Red." Buffalo opponents have scored 136 points while whitewashing the Bisons and R. P. I. foes show a total of 103 points against none for the Troy eleven.

A close rival of Hobart for victory honors is St. Lawrence, tucked away in the north country village of Canton, with three wins and only one loss, the latter to Colgate.

Coach E. N. "Speed" Wilson began the season at Hobart with a veteran team and a host of great material from an undefeated frosh eleven. He was pessimistic at the start and still is despite the fact the Deacons trounced Holbrook, 52-0, in the opener, and then defeated Union 7-0 and Hamilton 9-7.

Minneapolis—Paul Jones, 217, Houston, Tex., defeated Ray Steele, 218, Glendale, Cal. One fall.

MICKEY THE MAN IN THE IRON MASK

III. Mickey's Mileposts.

By EARL HILLIGAN,
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Mickey Cochrane's first year (1925) in the American League established him as one of the great men of baseball.

Not only did he catch 134 games as a rookie, but he finished the season with a batting average of .331. In that first year up from the minors he succeeded (Cy) Perkins as first string backstop for the Philadelphia Athletics. Perkins coached the youngster right into his own job—without any ill feeling.

Years afterward, on the day Cochrane was appointed manager of the Detroit Tigers, his first act was to hire Perkins as coach—and now the Tiger pilot talks over every problem with his old friend and mentor.

* * *

Mickey stayed with the Athletics nine years all told, absorbing the baseball philosophy of Connie Mack and getting his baptism in world series baseball. His batting average for the nine years with the Athletics was .321. He hit .400 for the six games of the 1929 world series won by the Athletics, fell off to .222 when Mack's men won their second straight world championship the next year and batted .160 when Philadelphia was knocked off the pinnacle by the St. Louis Cardinals in 1931.

He batted only .293 in 1928 but he was voted the American League's most valuable player at the season's close. The honor was bestowed upon him again when he led the Detroit Tigers to the American League pennant in 1934, his first season away from Philadelphia.

* * *

One of the first acts of the new Tiger manager, after signing (Cy) Perkins, was the acquisition of Leon (Goose) Goslin, veteran Washington outfielder. Mickey offered Johnny Stone, a young outfielder, for Goslin and when Clark Griffith jumped at the trade, Cochrane was subjected to criticism for bartering a youngster for an "old-timer."

Stone may be a good player some day," replied Cochrane. "But Goose Goslin is a good player—a great player—right now and now is when I need a good player. If I'm right on Goslin, it will be called a smart deal; if I'm wrong I'll be on the spot. The Goose is a real money player."

Mickey wasn't wrong. The Goose broke up many a ball game for Detroit, including the one which enabled Cochrane to cross the plate with the winning run that gave Detroit its first world series title.

* * *

Cochrane's success as Tiger manager is particularly gratifying to Walter O. Briggs, vice-president and half owner, with Frank J. Navin, of the Detroit ball club.

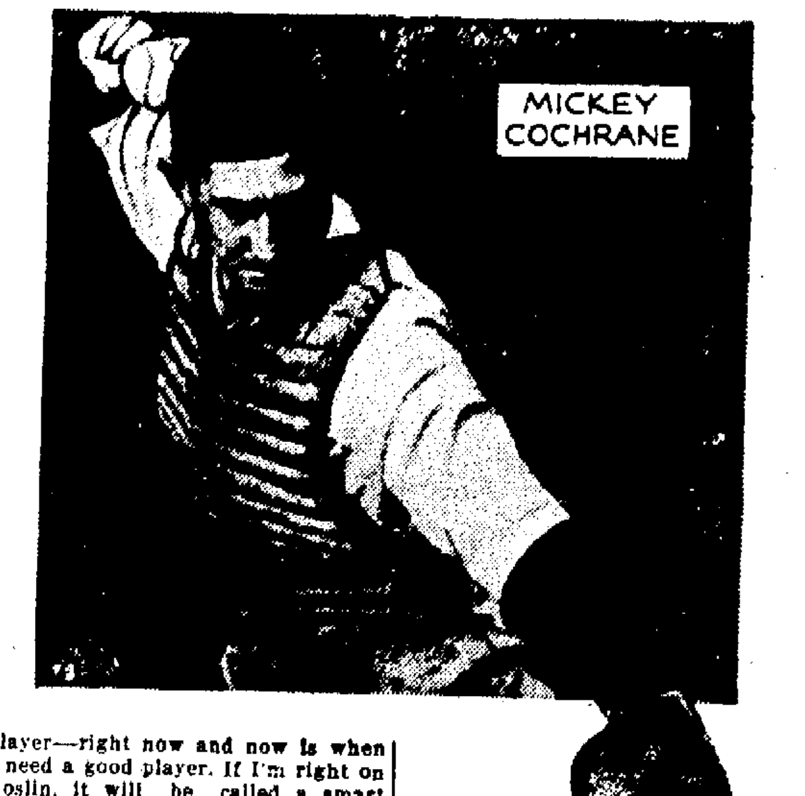
Four years ago Briggs told Navin: "We's got to buy Cochrane from Philadelphia. He's the best catcher in the game."

Navin tried, but Connie Mack laughed. "He's not for sale."

"Try again," advised Briggs. "Keep raising your bid. Make it so high he can't refuse."

Navin boosted the ante by $50,000, and again Mack refused, saying Cochrane definitely was not for sale.

"He'll sell some time," counseled Briggs. Finally Mack capitulated—for $100,000.



MICKEY COCHRANE

* * *

Cochrane came through with a pennant winner the first year and then entered the rough, tough world series with the St. Louis Cardinals. Mickey isn't given to pugnacity—unless the other fellow swings the first punch; but by the time that series closed, with St. Louis and the Dean brothers on top, he had given and absorbed enough punishment for a whole ball club. So bruising was the work of the catcher that Cochrane's legs were a welter of spike prints and he had to spend one night between games in a hospital.

In tribute to the gallant but losing fight Cochrane put up in the 1934 world series, the Detroit management gave him a $10,000 bonus.

Yale-Navy Game Should Be Real Scrap

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—It ought to be a whale of a melee in the Yale Bowl on Saturday when the Navy attacks one of the sharpest biting bulldogs in recent years.

That Yale team showed last week it can play football when it came back in a wild second half surge to overcome the mighty men of Penn. Navy doesn't shape up as a slouch, either.

Navy has beaten three teams by wide margins, starting off with a 30-0 conquest over William and Mary, then beating Mercer 27-0 and Virginia 26-7. The Navy has three complete teams to call on, two with heavy duty backfield and the third of the "pony" type.

Each backfield has a ten-second man, Schmidt on the first, Thomas with the second and Rankin with the ponies, and each backfield boasts a pitcher who can throw strikes with the oval.

Yale's Fine Ends.

As for Yale, Saturday told the story of her greatness. In Train and Kelley the Eli has two of the finest wingmen in the game.

Kelly caught the two passes that won the game, and both were difficult ones to gather in while in a full lope. Then there is Hessberg, who runs like a frightened antelope; Frank, Ewart, Roscoe and a few others.

There are some other good games on the slate for Saturday. While Yale battles Navy, her traditional rival, Harvard, will be at West Point opposing Navy's arch antagonist, Army. Army never has beaten Harvard at West Point in their 40 years of rivalry and Dick Harlow, Harvard's new head coach, doesn't relish the idea of being the first to lead a Harvard team to defeat there.

Pennsylvania and Columbia ought to provide a lively encounter while other interesting battles should include: Michigan-Wisconsin, Purdue-Chicago, Rice-Southern Methodist, Oklahoma-Iowa State, Alabama-Tennessee, Auburn-Kentucky, Georgia-North Carolinaa State, Georgia Tech-Duke, Oregon State-University of Southern California, California-Santa Clara and Utah-Denver.

Rumored That Foxx May Leave Athletics

Philadelphia, Oct. 16 (AP).—The baseball air was thick today with new talk that Jimmy Foxx may be doing his slugging for another club than for the Athletics next year.

The rumors—quiet for 24 hours since the report started circulating that the burly infielder would go to the Cleveland Indians in a three-cornered deal involving also the Boston Red Sox—started up again with the announcement that Connie Mack has acquired a star first-sacker from the coast league.

There was no word from Mack—not only because he is out of town, but also for the reason that the A's veteran pilot never talks about those things until he's ready to.

Foxx, himself, just smiles when you ask him how he'd like wearing different livery.

But the fact remains that Mack, although he has Jimmy as a capable first-baseman and hitter extraordinary, has obtained another guardian for the initial sack—Jim Oglesby of Los Angeles, who hit for .365 during the 1935 campaign and averaged better than .300 in his three-year coast stay. Formerly with the Western Association, Oglesby was picked up by the A.'s for the usual draft price, $7,500.

The rumors involving a Foxx sale or trade have been legion. They've had him variously reported as headed for Cleveland, the Chicago White Sox, the Boston Red Sox, and even at one time to the A.'s arch rivals, the New York Yankees.

THIRD AVENUE A. C. HOLDS ORGANIZATION MEETING

At a meeting of the Third Avenue A. C. held Tuesday night officers were elected as follows: Frank Kreglewski, president; Joe Hudela, vice president; Joe Brayton, treasurer; John Van Steenburgh, secretary. The club decided to put a basketball team into the field to represent them this season. Following the meeting refreshments were served.

SPORT SLANTS
by Pap

"That kid is the gamest pit I have ever seen," remarked Mi Cochrane. "With Hack on third none out in the ninth inning poured in six fast breaking cu to dispose of Jurges, French Galan to retire the Cubs withou score."

The pitcher whom Cochr praised so generously was the s der Tommy Bridges, and the incid referred to was the tense mom or two in the Cubs' half of the ni inning of the last game in the wo series, just before the stage was for the final dramatic touch wh spelled victory and the champion for the Tigers.

Bridges' exhibition throughout time he was on the mound in closing game was one of rare co age. Tommy was not pitching rea great ball, that is not until he fou himself in one of those freque holes that kept him in hot water m of the game. It was a game, hill battle he waged against Chica

He rose to his greatest heights that unforgettable ninth inning. took courage to stand out there the mound, and blaze fast-breaki curves over the plate when the sligh est mistake might mean a hit or long fly to score the run which wou mean the ball game and possibly t championship. Tennessee Tomm never hesitated or faltered. walked off the mound after the thi out, prepared to return and fight out until the game was called account of darkness if need be. was spared the effort when Tigers pushed over the winning r in their half of the ninth.

A Birdie For Parks

Sam Parks, U. S. national ope golf champion, flashed the sam brand of courage when he sunk 30-foot putt on the 36th green the Ridgewood Country Club to gai an even break with Alfred Perr British open titleholder, in their match for the "unofficial world open championship". The pair me in one of the singles of the recen Ryder Cup matches between th American and British professionals Going into the 36th hole Perry an Parks dormie one. Both were on th green in two, Perry being away an about 35 feet from the cup. His put slipped a foot past the cup assurin him of a par 4, and apparently th match as well. Parks carefull studied the roll of the green and lined up his putt. Deliberately he stroked the ball and sent it straigh for the cup to drop for a three. It took a birdie to even the match but Parks came through with it when he most needed it.

Baer's Act Puzzles

Fred Perry showed courage, of a slightly different brand, when he refused to default after his injury in his match with Wilmer Allison for the national singles tennis championship. No one could have criticized him if he had elected to retire, for it was obvious that the fall had left him in poor shape to continue.

Was Max Baer lacking in courage or was he simply smart to stay on the floor while he was counted out in the fourth round of his bout with Joe Louis? Max admits that he could have climbed to his feet but does not hesitate to add that he knew he was no match for the Brown Bomber.

Kendall Oil Five Again in the Field

The Kendall Oil Five will reorganize for the season. They will play their home games on the Municipal Auditorium floor, as preliminaries to the regular association games.

This is the Kendalls' third season. So far they have a total of 64 games won and only 12 lost, competing against some of the best teams in the Hudson valley. Last year they entered the semi-pro field, winning 22 out of 38 games played.

The line-up will include Rhymer, Zeeh, Every, Schline, Dykes and Debrosky. Ed Coughlin will sponsor and coach the team, with Ed Ashdown as manager.

The team will hold a meeting Thursday night at the American Legion building.

Alumni Have Long Roster to Choose from

Kingston High School alumni who played on teams during the past three years, will turn out for practice at the rear of the Municipal Auditorium at 7 o'clock tonight, in preparation for their game against the high school team on Saturday.

Among former players, from which a team will be chosen, are: Cullum, Scully, Kelder, Raible, Pretzsch, Debrosky, Noce, Tomshaw, Ryan, Ferguson, Levy, Every, Every, Tardernee, Sahloff, Burgevin, Tierney (Jim), Saunders, Hyatt, Pirie, Ferch, Rosen, Clarke, Gaddis, Steigerwald, Myers, Fitzgerald, Nekos, Gerwin, Burhans, Quest, Thomas, Parker, Canfield, Whittaker.

MAKES UNUSUAL CATCH IN SACANDAGA LAKE

"Klink" Maines and Ed Noble of the paid fire department, with Julius Buchholtz, Ed Murialkiewicz and Jake Schneider, chef of the C. & F. Social Club, have returned home from a fishing trip to Sacandaga lake.

They brought back a nice catch, the largest being a seven-pound pickerel caught by "Klink" Maines. Jake's contribution was a horse's bit which he brought up from the depths of the lake. He wants to try again in the hope that perhaps next time he will get the horse. Jake is now displaying his "prize catch" at the Cornell Fire House.

Basketball Games At St. Ursula Academy

The second of a series of interclass basketball games was played by the girls of the Academy of St. Ursula on Tuesday. Amid enthusiastic cheering, splendid work was accomplished by each team, with the Seniors emerging victorious over the Sophomores, 28-26, and the Juniors conquering the gallantly fighting Freshmen, 22-20. Both games were excitingly close. A great improvement was noted especially in the Freshmen "Fireflies" and it was only by dint of hard fighting that the Juniors defeated them.

The Very Rev. Father Stanley witnessed this school activity, and the mothers of several of the girls were among the interested spectators.

Over 500 Fans Enjoyed Golden Gloves Bouts Here

Fighting for the pleasure of more than 500 boxing fans Tuesday night at the Municipal Auditorium, Frankie Mirable, hard slugging little Albany featherweight, won the decision over Raymond Olivio, 129, international Golden Gloves champion, in the main bout.

Mirable won the decision by virtue of a flash in the fifth round, taking this heat by margin enough to impress the judges. His fists were like flails in the closing stanza during which he drove Mirable from one corner of the ring to the other, punching away at his body and head.

Olivio fought his best in the fourth round. He floored Mirable for the count of nine. The tough little Albanian apparently could have gotten up before Refferee Bill Singer tolled off the nine, but stayed down to rest.

In going on with Olivio, Mirable displayed plenty of gameness. He had been sick in bed three days before the fight, suffering from a case of grip. But he went on last night so as not to disappoint the fans.

"I don't feel as strong as usual," he said, "but if I don't fight the fans won't like it. Neither will the newspaper writers, so I'm going to fight."

The club physician after examining Mirable's heart gave his consent to let him go on.

Phil Elaqua, 140, Albany boxer, fighting a far different battle than the one in which he recently turned slugger, lost to Bill Skinner, 153, New York state champion. Skinner substituted for Jimmy Lambert, Golden Gloves champ.

Skinner put up a good fight, doing as well as Lambert could have if he had not gone to a hospital to be opperated on for appendicitis.

In losing to Skinner, Elaqua lost his reputation of never having been floored. Twice he was knocked down last night, once in the fourth and once in the fifth round for counts of nine.

Kid Chapple, Kingston favorite, won again, preserving his record which is clean from defeats after nine fights. Chapple defeated Pal Gardiner of Saranac who stayed on the defensive all the time and made it hard for the Kid to get a crack at him. The decision was not so popular, some of the fans sending up a loud cry of disapproval when it was announced. The boys weighed 122.

Results of the other fights:

Danny Hubbell, 120, Waterford, deefated Joe Wall, 119, New York, 5 rounds

Charlie Forezzi, 120, Albany, outpointed Manuel Roosa, 121, New York, in 5 rounds.

Babe Marrinucci, 135, Troy, won decision over Dave Pino, 132, Albany, in 3 rounds.

Jerry Williams, 140, New York, outpointed Patsy Torres, 139, Rensselaer, in 5 rounds.

Officials were: John Finerty and William Roedell, judges; Bill Singer, referee; Morton Finch, timekeeper; Sam Riber, announcer.

MARKET FOR FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

New York, Oct. 16 (AP).—(State Department of Agriculture and Markets)—Price changes on apples and pears from upstate New York were few and small, particularly on good quality, carefully graded fruit. Supplies were moderate and the demand was fair. Western New York apples, N. Y. U. S. Grade No. 1, 2¼ inch, McIntosh in open box or bushel baskets jobbed out at $1-$1.25, wealthy 80-85 cents, Rhode Island Greening 85c-$1 and 3-inch 20 oz. 75c-$1. Bartlett and seckel pears brought $1.50-$2 and Clapps Favorite $1.50-75.

Supplies of prunes from the western part of the state were moderate. Offerings showed wide range in quality and condition. The demand was rather slow and the market ruled inactive. Half bushel baskets of Fellenberg prunes sold from 75c-$1.15, mainly $1-$1.10. The German variety brought 60c-65c.

The demand for New York state grapes wa srather slow, nevertheless, the undertone of the market was about steady for good quality. Supplies were moderate. Twelve quart climax baskets of U. S. No. 1 juice Concords jobbed out at 32-34 cents, occasionally as high as 35 cents. Niagaras brought 38-40 cents.

Senator Asks More Emphatic Neutrality

New York, Oct. 16 (AP)—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, home from a vacation in Europe, suggested today that the United States' neutrality policy be made "more emphatic."

But the Michigan Republican warned against considering the nation's new, mandatory formula with its arms export ban as a buttress to League of Nations sanctions.

Expressing "complete agreement" with the policy as proclaimed by the President, he said in a statement:

"If anything, I would make it more emphatic.

"It may deny us an expression of our natural sympathies in a given dispute, but it substantially insulates us against dreadful consequences which otherwise could embroil us again in alien wars.

"The loss of incidental commerce is infinitely less important than the maintenance of American peace."

Vandenberg, who has been mentioned in discussions of Republican presidential timber, said in a shipboard interview.

"I am not a candidate for anything on earth."

Work Progressing On East Chester By-Pass

Work on the construction of the East Chester street by-pass to Route 9-W is progressing and practically all of the concrete pavement has been laid from East Chester street and Broadway to where the new road hooks onto 9-W just beyond the railroad crossing on the Saugerties road. The contractor is now busy building the concrete sidewalks and curbs and making all necessary trims.

"In digging gladiolus bulbs this fall, remember to cut and burn the tops before the bulbs are dug. For small numbers, the bulbs may be dug and placed in paper bags. Sprinkle naphthalene flakes among the bulbs at the time of digging. Later, as the corms dry, they may be cleaned and stored for the winter. The removal of old corms and roots should be done as early as possible. Store the bulbs in a cool place where the temperature is forty degrees Fahrenheit," Dr. Fridham advises.

People with automobile sometimes pull up trees from wayside places, tie them on their cars and take them home to plant. It is not unusual for such trees to harbor injurious insects and fungi. Rarely will these trees live, but they may have introduced a disease fatal to other trees. It is a poor plan to get trees from the roadside, where there is no assurance that they are free of disease.

MORAN STUDENTS SAW ARMY BEAT GETTYSBURG

Practically all of the 15,000 seats reserved for boys and girls in Michi Stadium were occupied last Saturday afternoon, and another 10,000 were taken by cadets and other grown-ups.

The occasion was Boys' and Girls' Day, designated annually, during the football season, by the United States Military Academy. Participating in this event was a large delegation of students of the Moran School of Business, who, together with an equally large group of high school students, enjoyed an afternoon packed with fun and frolic. The principal feature of the day's program was a football game between Army and Gettysburg College.

The two buses chartered for the trip rang with song and merriment. Drivers of other cars and people along the route turned in wonderment, but inevitably broke into smiles on hearing the song and laughter—unmistakable signs of a really good time.

The success of this outing is directly attributable to the careful planning, weeks in advance, by the recently organized Student Council of the Moran School. The members have put a commendable spirit into their work, and the outcome of their first activity has been highly successful.

Work Registration Of Relief Clients Here 85 Per Cent Complete

Joseph R Carey, manager of the Ulster county National Reemployment Service office at Kingston, announced today that registration of the employable members of home and work relief families, eligible for employment on WPA projects, had been 85 per cent completed as of October 1, in this county.

For the entire state, William H Lang, state reemployment director, announced that these registrations had been approximately 90 per cent completed

In order to clear up possible misconceptions as to the functions of the Reemployment Service in connection with these relief registrations, Mr. Lange made the following statement.

"The employers in the situation are those in charge of the various WPA projects. The function of the Reemployment Service is merely to assist them in obtaining qualified personnel subject to the regulations governing selection of such personnel. So doing, the Reemployment Service acts like any employment agency. It registers applicants. It classifies them according to their skill, training, and experience. And, on request of the employer, in this case those in charge of WPA projects, it refers workers in the classifications asked for.

"The Reemployment Service has no responsibility for sponsoring or directing emergency work projects in this state. It cannot refer workers to such projects unless they are requisitioned by the WPA. Moreover, the determination of the requirements to be filled by workers to be employed on such projects rests with the WPA. WPA gives us specifications We try to fill them as accurately as possible."

CONSERVATION DEPARTMENT MEN GET 67 POUND BEAVER

Albany, Oct. 15—A new resident of the De Bar Mountain Game Refuge of the Conservation Department is attracting much attention as she goes about the business of settling down on the refuge and finding suitable living quarters. Not only are the animals, birds and fishes looking her over with some degree of wonderment, but also the humans who work on or frequent the refuge. The reason for all this is that the newcomer is the heaviest beaver to be trapped in this state by Conservation Department employes since they took up this work.

Following receipt of complaints from residents of the section near Parishville, St. Lawrence county, that beaver were destroying timber and land there, the assistant trapper of the department, James Covey, was sent out to trap them and transfer them to the De Bar Mountain Refuge in neighboring Franklin county. Covey completed the job assigned to him. In his net he landed one large female and when weighed she tipped the scales at 67 pounds. The largest beaver previously trapped weighed 15 pounds less, or 52 pounds.

Albany, Oct. 15—The fall tree planting operations of the Conservation Department are now in full swing and at the termination of work last Friday over half the 20,000,000 trees scheduled to be planted were in the ground. All this work is being done on the state reforestation areas.

The total number of trees planted, as reported by the district foresters Friday night was 10,959,869. The work is being done by members of the CCC. The work will cease upon the advent of heavy frosts. However, it is expected that the work will be completed before that time.

Age Is Assuming Lead in Business

Washington, Oct. 15 (AP).—In the America of the future, says the National Resources Board, youth will take a back seat while the old folks run business and the government.

This forecast was based on studies indicating that "if present trends continue" the United States' population will be stabilized in 25 years, with twice as many citizens past the age of 60 as there are now and the number of young people under 20 decreased in the same proportion.

Visualizing the future, the committee, in a report made public yesterday, saw "age gaining ascendancy over youth in business and government" It also indicated that quieter forms of recreation will replace today's high-speed activities and that fewer primary educational facilities will be equipped.

The population trend was indicated by studies made by some of the state planning boards and by Warren Thompson and P. K. Whelpton of the Scripps foundation for research in population problems.

They took into consideration an increase in life expectancy and a decrease in the specific birth rate in reaching their conclusions. Continuance of present immigration laws also was counted upon.

Indications were, it was added, "that occupational characteristics of the population will change and that as the mechanization of agriculture and industry increases, opportunities for employment in such new fields as education, conservation, recreation and service occupations will increase."

Don't let gladiolus, canna or dahlia roots remain out over night after digging. The frosts will do them no good. Put them under cover to dry.
